Hidden in Plain Sight

WWWG Productions Ltd. Singapore

In the fading afternoon light with the rainbow hazy of the last ray of the setting sun filtering quietly through the monsoon clouds that have hung over the city for the largest part of today, as they form the Japanese Battle Flag of the Last Great War.

It is here at a favorite tourist stop, here in the capital of Thailand, that we pick up again with Emil in yet another of those "Where is Waldo" stylized volume of work.

Emil claims that within each statue is a frozen spirit, encased, awaiting a future release from their stone internment.

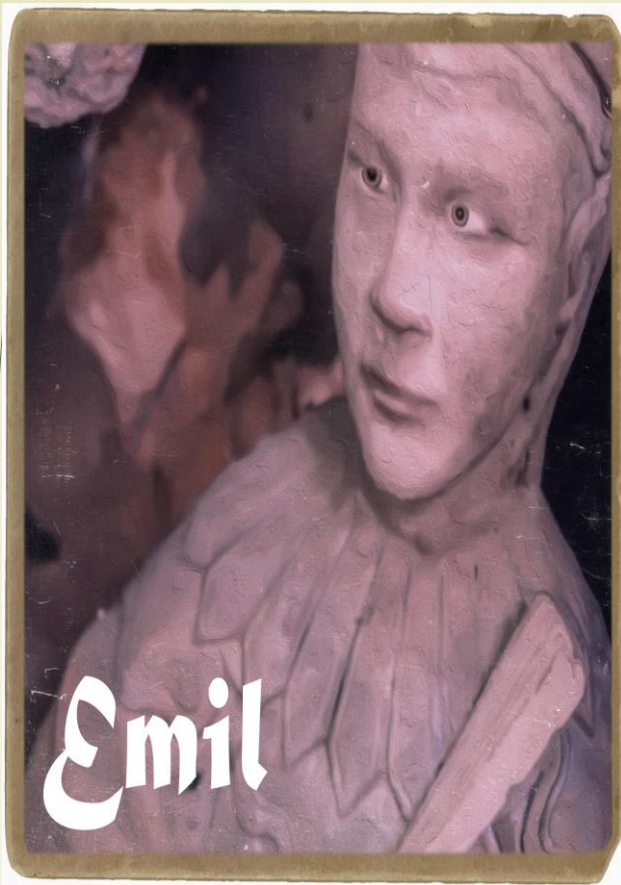

Yes, more than strange but, that is Emil and I for one, have seen stranger things turn out to be true.

Emil's mission is to tempt the spirit free from the spell that turned them to stone and usher their path to heaven. How? Emil didn't say!

Seine Lagone

Greeting to all my assembled, a warm shout out to all my fellow Ghost Hunters; we have gathered here on this late summer afternoon, we are on a holy mission seeking redemption for all those gallant warriors, elder statesmen and even chambermaids who were so misfortunate to have been at the long place, at the wrong time and without a doubt, some did deserve their faith but, that is not my mission to make a moral judgement on the why's of them being cast into stone by the evil, wickedness of an ancient wizard, an evil tech with the advanced knowledge, the power to transform matter by a making a calculated change to its magnetic, vibration sequence(s) and in this case, turned them to stone.

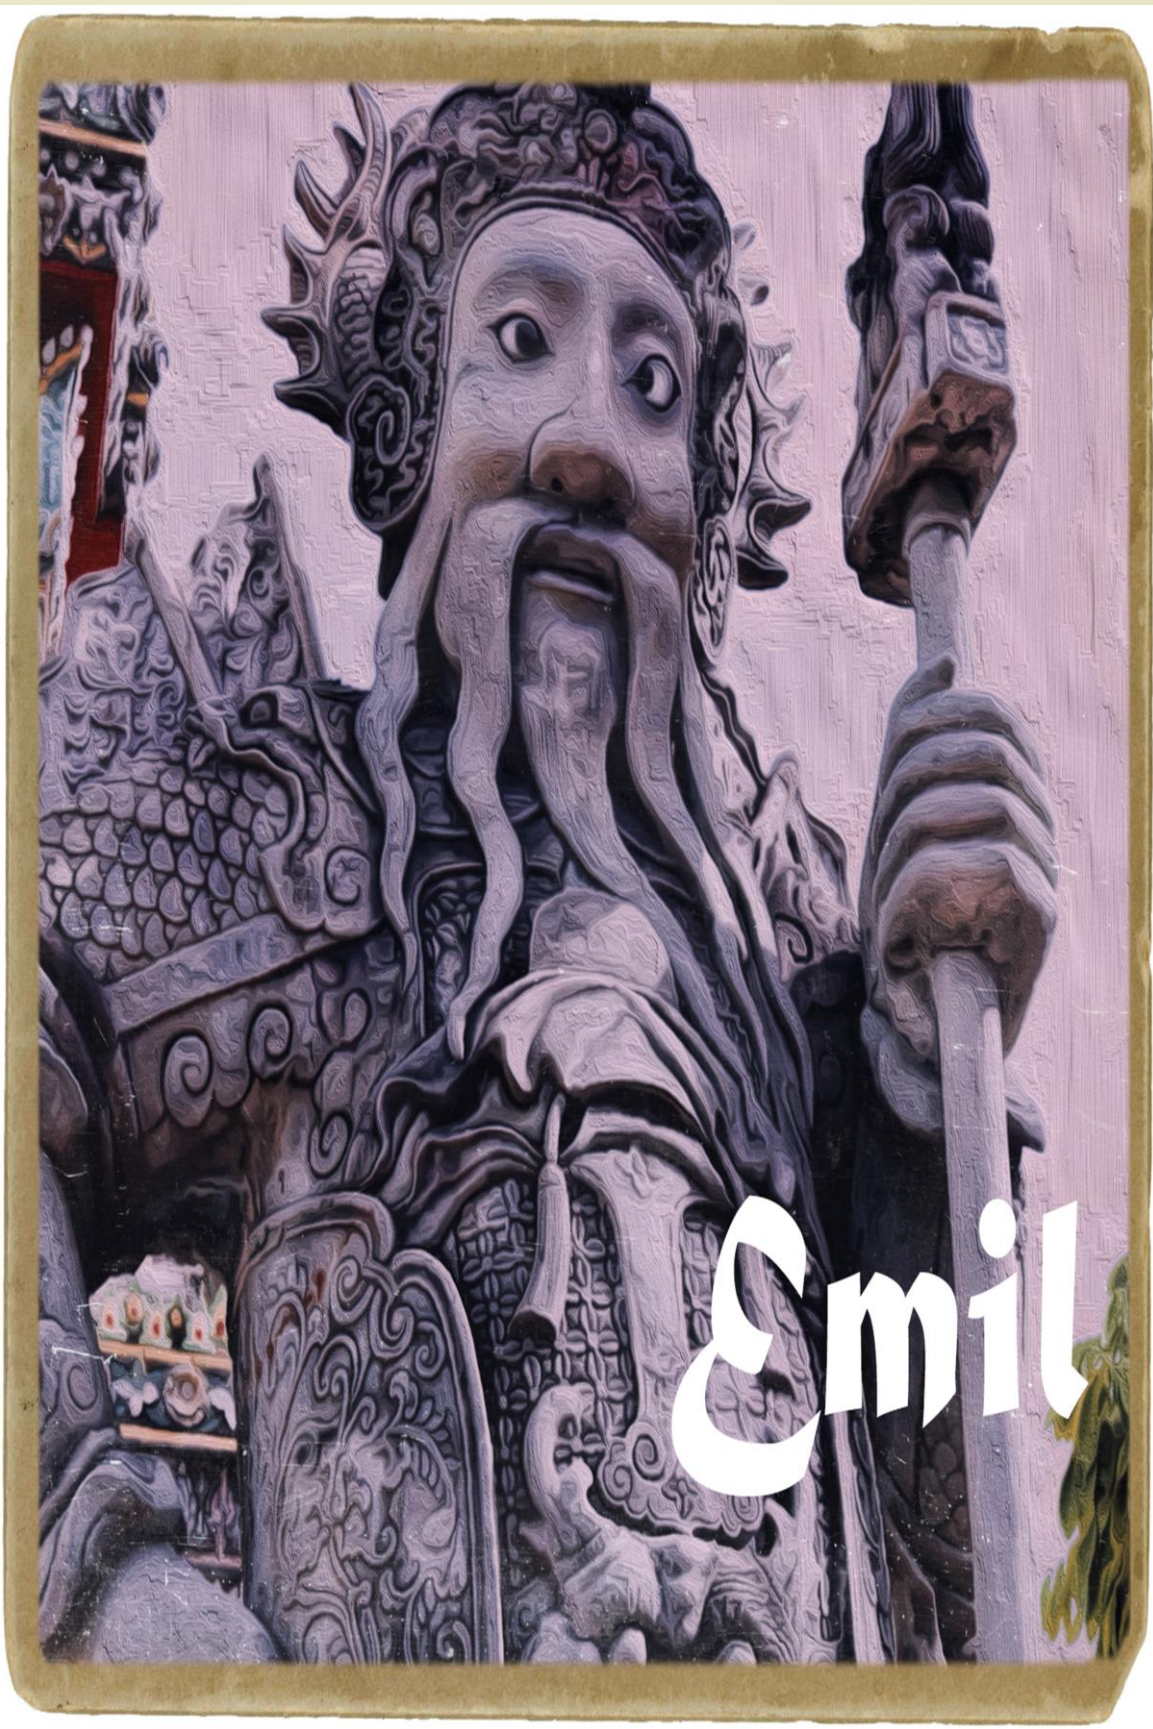

Much as Lot's wife was turned into a pillar of salt...maybe not her, as there is ample proof that it was not salt but, it was rather a case that she was rendered to radioactive ash - which would have an isotope isometric which could be mistaken by the uneducated or those not familiar with the effects of a nuclear blast to be salt.

Either way, she was sheered to charcoaled dust after being caught in open ground, far too close to ground zero, unsheltered unlike old man lot and the rest of his clan who ducked and covered...it actual worked, as advertised in 1950's public schools ...and I am sure sorry to get side tracked as we have a serous mission here and not much time as these brave, cast into stone heroes are on borrowed time as this procedure from what we have discovered is more much time sensitive and at a certain point, it is not revisable, they can't come back.

I won't trouble you with even the simple science involved or little-a-lone, with all the technical justification of Telsa's theory which says nothing is solid and we are but, simple electrically charged particles that are vibrating at a specific frequency that gives us the illusion of solidness. If we understand this and if we could find a way to adjust our own frequency to that of the wall, we could walk through the wall as we do through a wall of water, which in a two dimensional world would seem as solid as a brick wall does to us or we could actually free ancient people encased into stone and return their souls to the pathway, the stairway of Jacob, send them off to heaven and some, constructive face time with St. Peter.

It is a commonly known fact...

Granted, well not to everyone but to some of those in the know, they will freely share with you a universal fact that 528 Hz is both the human body and Earth's natural Frequency...

"You must remember that everything is vibration!"

Same?

I was confused at first and I was left to internalize my lack of a scientific education and not seem like Forest Gump's dumber cousin...I must have been...I know that I was absent from science class that day, I think?

Up to the point of this conversation, like you, I had not ever felt the need to acquire or little-a-lone, retain such information but, now it will be critical to our upcoming effort(s) to already know this basic data.

Seems that to this little tidbit of knowledge will unlock some of the greatest mysteries of the universe.

Not in the way that the National Enquire would lead you to believe or in a pseudo-science, dating infocommercials that populate late night cable TV...

"When you get close to other people, you may feel as if your energy drains away, a depressing or lazy feeling or when you get close to other people, you may feel as if your body and mind becomes more energized, more hopeful and optimistic...and for $39.99, you will get our Positivity Meter... and if are first one hundred callers, you will receive FREE SHIPPING!"

You remember, down in the Southern Philippines, you recall seeing those psychic surgeons?

Yea! That's it... without the use of a surgical instrument, a practitioner will press the tips of his/her fingers against the patient's skin in the area to be treated.

You remember how the practitioner's hands appear to penetrate into the patient's body painlessly and blood seems to flow?

The practitioner will then show organic matter or foreign objects apparently removed from the patient's body, clean the area, and then end the procedure with the patient's skin showing no wounds or scars...

This is closer to what the old man was talking about but, he explained that the human heart is a source of electro-magnetism that, even at a few meters away, is detectable by modern scientific instruments according to recent research he had done at the University of Moscow's Physics Department Research Lab.

He had put a video up on YouTube that illustrated this better than I ever will be able to but, because he was Russian and that it is an election year in the United States, it was quickly and repeatedly deleted by all of those better minds of Google for what they implied, they told him that their algorithm flagged the video, they said that it was all part of a secret Russian Plot of "Russian Attempts to destabilize the American Election..."

OK?

Sometimes you got to really wonder, if they really created Google, GMAIL and YouTube or maybe it was the space aliens or God Help America...the Russians made it and are using these clowns as front men...you just got to wonder...as they don't seem all that smart?

What the video showed was an image of an input electric current producing a magnetic field around one wire; this field passes through another wire and creates an output electric current.

In physical science, this is called magnetic induction.

Similarly, to magnetic induction in metal wires, the human electromagnetic field can be felt, or can influence, other people who are standing by.

Here is the importance of this deleted video and why it was so earth shattering is that it demonstrates that electricity waves – that energy can travel over a long distance energy wave, it also showed their newest research that demonstrates that human electricity may also transmit to great distances.

Does the phrase “Beam me up, Scotty?”
Do you get it?

It took me a while but, when he added the Star Trek reference, I got it!

Transporter Beams are possible if you can dial in the correct frequencies and build a sending/receiving unit.

While, Star Trek is still a way off, he said but, it is now (according to the bootleg copy of the video that I was sent) possible to transport data and they are on the verge of transporting static objects – no human trials, at least not that we know about...

Granted, it is in development and it is now, more like in the TV Show 12 Monkeys before Jones perfected the teader bond...everything organic is a nasty jumbo of freshly deceased road kill.

Regardless of its current shortcomings, it proves that electric force can transform into different types of energy waves, such as heat, radiation, radio and micro waves; and these energy waves can travel a long distance.

He further explained and promptly lost me by saying...

“A changing magnetic field will induce a changing electric field and vice-versa, the two are linked. These changing fields form electromagnetic waves. Electromagnetic waves can travel not only through air and solid materials, but also through space.”

It seems, according to the old man, that the human nervous system can create electric energy waves and that it can be measured with scientific instruments.

The human body produces infra-red radiation that, with night vision equipment, can be seen from miles away.

I can now see why this info was taken down so quickly with a "Fake News" classification, if I was the Military, Industrial Complex that had invested billions in all the state-of-the-art, killer stealth technology, I would be dearly afraid of this video that shows so clearly you can defeat their systems just by dialing up on a difference frequency and then, start locating people (flying at 40,000 Feet, they should be easy to spot?) instead of searching for billion dollar stealth bombers.

Think about it?

Apparently, they didn't or if they did, they sure forgot to share this information with all of their military purchasers.

Opps!

"528 Hz is both the human body and Earth's natural Frequency..."

Told you that would be important...

Were you all taking notes?

*"I cannot teach anybody anything.
I can only make them think"*

Socrates wrote this or did he?

Can we verify that this isn't yet another secret Russian Plot to re-educate Americans that he slept with science way back in the

The meeting with the old man from the University of Moscow...made me ponder if I was being played and that there might well be an early morning raid on WWWG by the FBI or would it be the NSC?

Am I a toy of some cruel Russian Conspiracy?

Surely, I hope not!

I have kind of a soft spot from my old bud, the Donald and I would hate to think that I had any part (no matter how stupid) in the current plotting by the career civil servants, the elitist seeking to create an their own American Coup d'état and which seems clearly to be fronted by our good old, true American buddies (I assumed they are as every time I see them, they are wrapped in an American Flag) comingling behind closed doors over at the DOJ and that are generously funded by those lovable people who seem to be only several steps removed from the Clinton Foundation - who surely gives new meaning to dolling out money for the "Wimpy" crowd of Washington's professional cadre of deadbeats and moochers (remember from Popeye?) for a donation today...I will gladly do whatever you want me to, tomorrow...no it was a hamburger that Wimpy was asking for and at least, back in the day, he promised to repay you by next Thursday...old school!

You get it thought, don't ya?

Wow!

See the real cost of inflation?

You couldn't get anybody to do anything for the cost of a hamburger...in this new age.

How sad!

Anyway, the old man, a full professor of the sciences has seen fit to try and properly educate me to understand that the body requires electrical transmitters, "spark plugs," in order to send "messages" as electrical signals within the body.

These brain signals are transmitted mainly through bio-engineered, body fluids instead of imported microchips from China.

"Many cases of brain fog (inability to concentrate or connect thoughts), ADD/ADHD, muscle cramps/spasms and tingling/numbness can be the symptom of a "low battery" -lacking the electrical impulse stimulus necessary to perform nerve and muscle functions."

Minerals are stored primarily in the body's bone and muscle tissue. The absorbed mineral must then be carried through the blood to the cells and then absorbed, in order for the cell membrane to be utilized. A proper balance of minerals and electrolytes make up the electrically charged ions that help regulate the body's water and acid-alkaline balance, osmotic pressure, nerve impulse conduction and muscle contraction.

Digestion and absorption is especially a challenge for those with symptoms of any disorder that compromises the digestive system including, but not limited to, fibromyalgia, Crohn's disease, irritable bowel, leaky gut, environmental illness, gulf war syndrome (Uhh...whatz?) and conditions which cause chronic diarrhea.

Then, he concluded with an interesting observation...

"It is life force that distinguishes animate objects from inanimate objects, the living from the dead and health from disease."

Life force is basically excited molecules or vibration.

It is not a thing it is an action.

"We more commonly know it as electricity."

These vibrations are composed of ions (electrolytes) that carry a positive or negative charge.

This is known as magnetism or energy and is found in all living things.

It is a natural force that pushes and pulls.

Unlike static electricity in which the ions fly in all directions, electricity in living beings has direction and is organized.

The earth is full of life and is a huge magnet, its magnetism is commonly misunderstood to be gravity.

Plants have magnetism as well.

If you have ever smelled a flower you are experiencing the magnetic field of that flower.

As discussed in our previous conversation(s), the body is composed of a certain number of vibrations.

According to the professor, a healthy human body has (roughly) 47,000,000,000 vibrations every second as per the Angstrom Unit.

As you can see, his explanation(s) are starting to wash over my head and I really know how the natives of New Guinea must have thought when the American Flyboys arrived (in the second great war) in those giant, silver metaled birds and left behind all the truly wonders of cargo...

I didn't want to look stupid dumb so I let "Angstrom Unit" just slide right on past me without even a wink but, I wrote it down as who knows when it will show up to be a question on Jeopardy...

"I will take 'what is Angstrom Unit' for $200, Alex."

The following is a transcript of my secret audio recording that I made of the professor's recent phone call that I made at the advice of my other old bud, Michael Cohen and he is very right about not letting an opportunity slip away as you never know when you are gonna need a “get out of jail, FREE” card...

So, I am filing this away, entitled it with this fancy title ‘The Cycle of Regeneration and Transformation’ but, as I learned most importantly from Michael, I have already edited it rather liberally to remove a good amount of the numerous ‘Umm’, ‘ahhh’, ‘you know’ and all my other gibberish, all edited out and thus giving me the ability to better present myself as a much sharper stick and to place myself closer to the center of this tale that might very well change the universe as we know it...

I hear ya!

There goes the neighborhood!

"The physical body has electrical Energy with a logical, scientific and perceivable reality. All disease, trauma, fear and adverse emotional reactions are due the relative low vibration (Energy) in the body."

The smart money is on the fact that it is our goal to Balance the vibratory (Energy) rate. When your body is functioning at its optimum, you are in a state of homeostasis, which means balance.

With homeostasis, every system of your body is working properly; you are a fine-tuned machine, running at full production.

The old man was building up to the concept and this is where I did pay attention to, the solution was simple in theory but, was proving to be allusive in a real world, the practical application of being able to control or adjust the actual frequency(s) at which the human body resonates.

By controlling this factor, we could quite literally end most disease amongst the other more profound, side benefits...transport beams...etc...

Think of it?

A world without early death, longer duration to life for all of God's children...just imagine? All seven plus billion of them.

What a disaster!

This blind curing of most diseases, it would wreck the economy...this would swiftly collapse many of the major industries from the hundred billion dollar-a-year managed healthcare industry, sink all of the major pharmaceutical giants - even Bayer, descending all the way down to even nursing homes and local funeral parlors, they all would be in financial receivership...

a true corporate nightmare, the end of world for all those who make a living off the God given gift of disease...not to mention a drastic dip in the dividend earnings for all those sweat old, blue hairs living uptown in brownstones or in their beach side condos in Bali.

With this in mind, I fear for the safety of our professor friend and I have no doubt that he will end up as a rumpled old rag cast off into a corner cell in a frozen gulag somewhere as even Russia has a very vital interest in the financial health of their own multi-billion ruble-a-year healthcare industries.

In fact, I am surprised that he still walks free amongst us.

Or is this all part of this secret, Russian Conspiracy?

Am I being played?

Am I being tested?

It is troubling that this info, as earth shattering as it is and with all its many applications for the good is being dumped upon my doorstep.

I have spent several pages with this at the back of my mind and it troubles me greatly. Shouldn't Dan Rather be getting this? Why me?

Then, as I turned to this page, I was reminded of yet another old bud, the one, the only Larry Nichols; and I recall what he taught us in his political boot camp...

“When the government wants to hide something, they hide it in plain view – which means that they will take some real serious shit and release it to the fringe, the tin foil hatters and imaginary dog lovers to publish and promote.

This way, by the time the majority of American hears the breaking news, they will be conditioned to dismiss it as it originates back with the tin foil hatter crowds.

Remember the number one publisher of some of America's deepest, darkest secrets, The Globe Magazine?

Makes you want to rethink about all those stories about Batboy from the deepest, the darkest part of the Amazon, doesn't it?

Thanks to all those richly detailed stories about how Batboy was the product of secret government experiments in bio-engineering; when the real stories surfaced in the 2000's that exposed the extent of our government's involvement in gene cloning and how the experiments had created a troubling number of un-natural species in their secret bio labs...

which, to be truthful...in the need for total openness and full disclosure, was based upon the initial research done in the Nazi Concentration Camps in the 1940s.

Yes, campers!

All of our entire genetics research programs were fathered by those NAZI scientists who took advantage of the unending supply of captured people(s) and the ability to do live, human testing without any oversight, limits or apparently, any true remorse and who (many were) were brought to the United States, England and Russia to continue the research that they had started back then.

Oh ya!

We did in fact, hang some of them but, for the most part, they were the ones that were not vital to continuing the research or were just plain trouble makers, like good old, Hermann Goring.

So successful was the mythology about the Batboy series that, no one really paid much if any attention to all the details about what had really happened other than to immediately remember, Batboy!

Watch the Will Smith movie, "Men in Black" part one and you will see that they were trying to tell you!

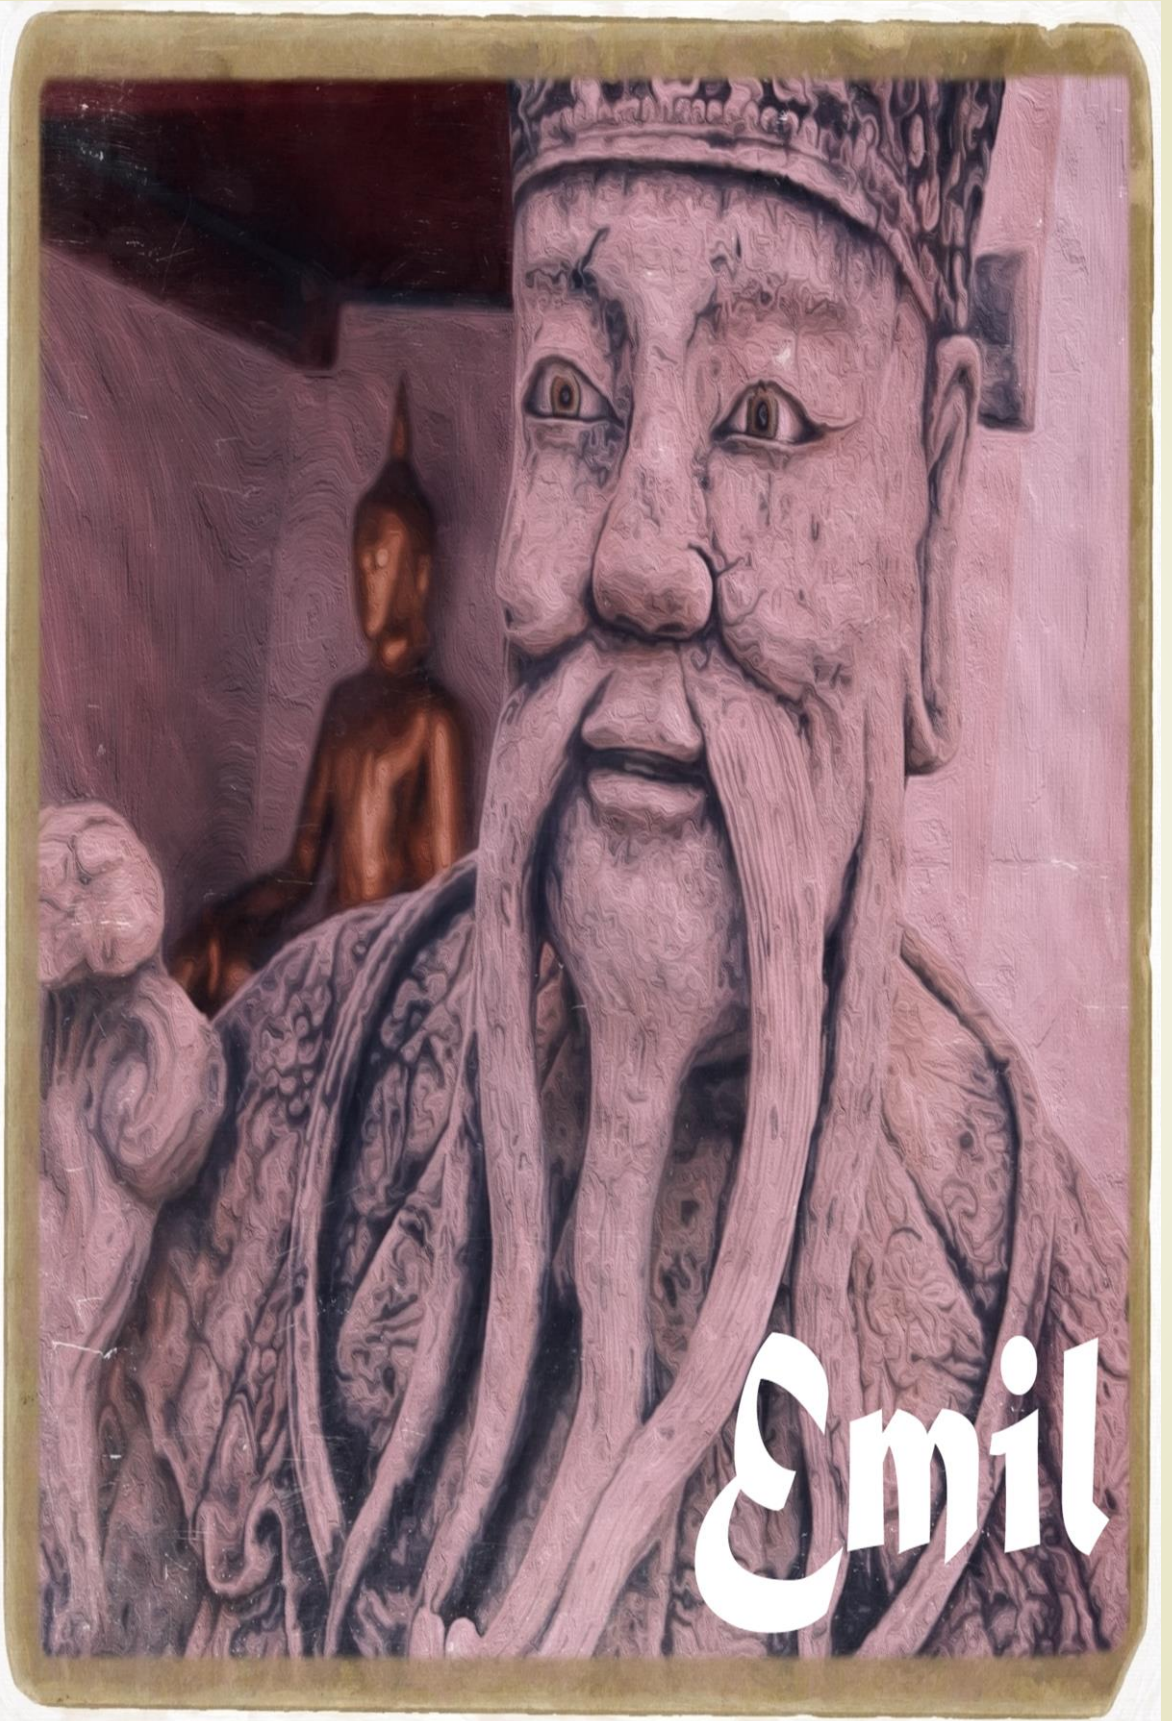

So, here we are and I am at a lost as I feel that I am being played by the some rouge element of the American government's deep state of entrenched civil servants and now that I think about it, who is to say that the professor is really Russian or a real professor for that matter?

I truly miss those old Cold War Days and even shed an occasional tear for all those departed, really missing all those Commies!

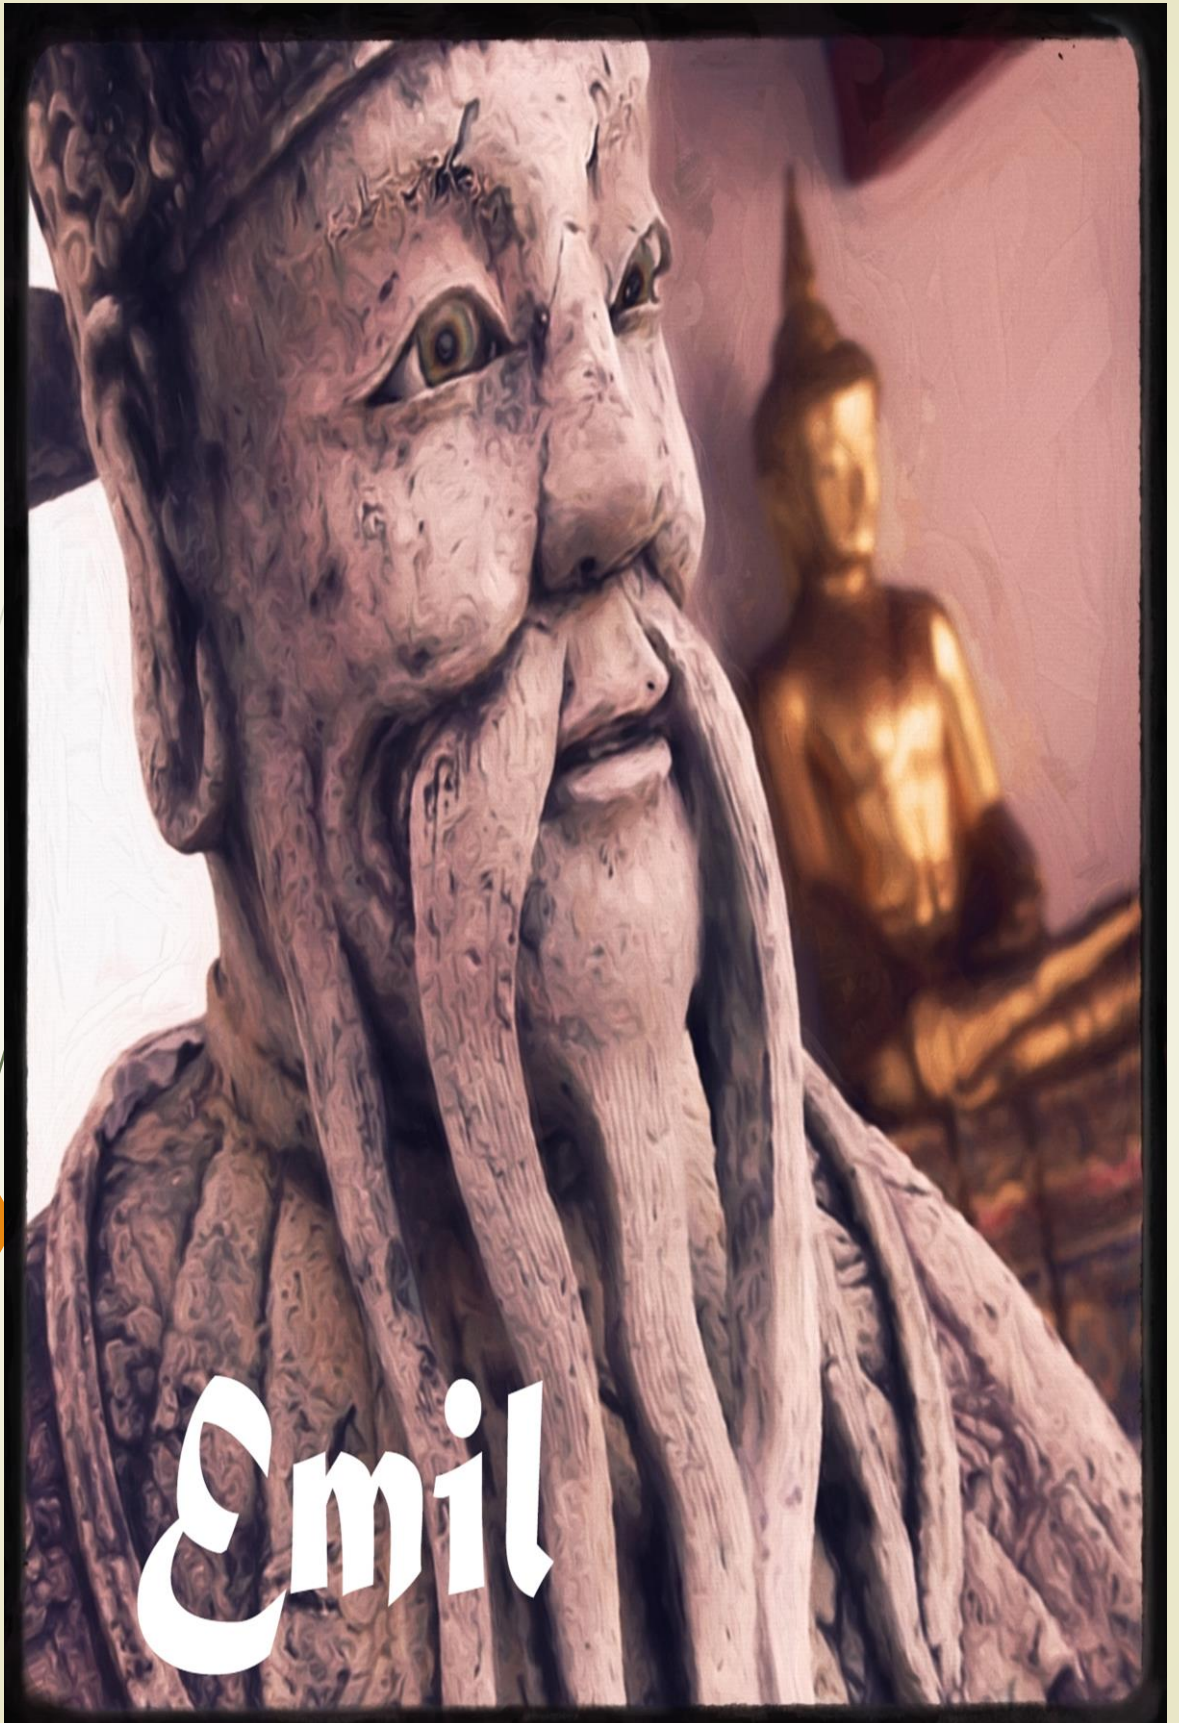

Life was just plain simple, you didn't need a program to explain who all of the players are. Life and politics was so much simpler as there was only the beginnings of today's most trumpeted notion of a secret, deep state, that cadre of disgruntled, unfireable, career civil servants who claim "We know better!"

Then they killed Kennedy, created the greatest conspiracy theory of all time... "Lee Harvey Oswald was a lone gun man..." (If you really still believe that, then you must be a member of that deep state...are ya?) and set all this current situation in motion...

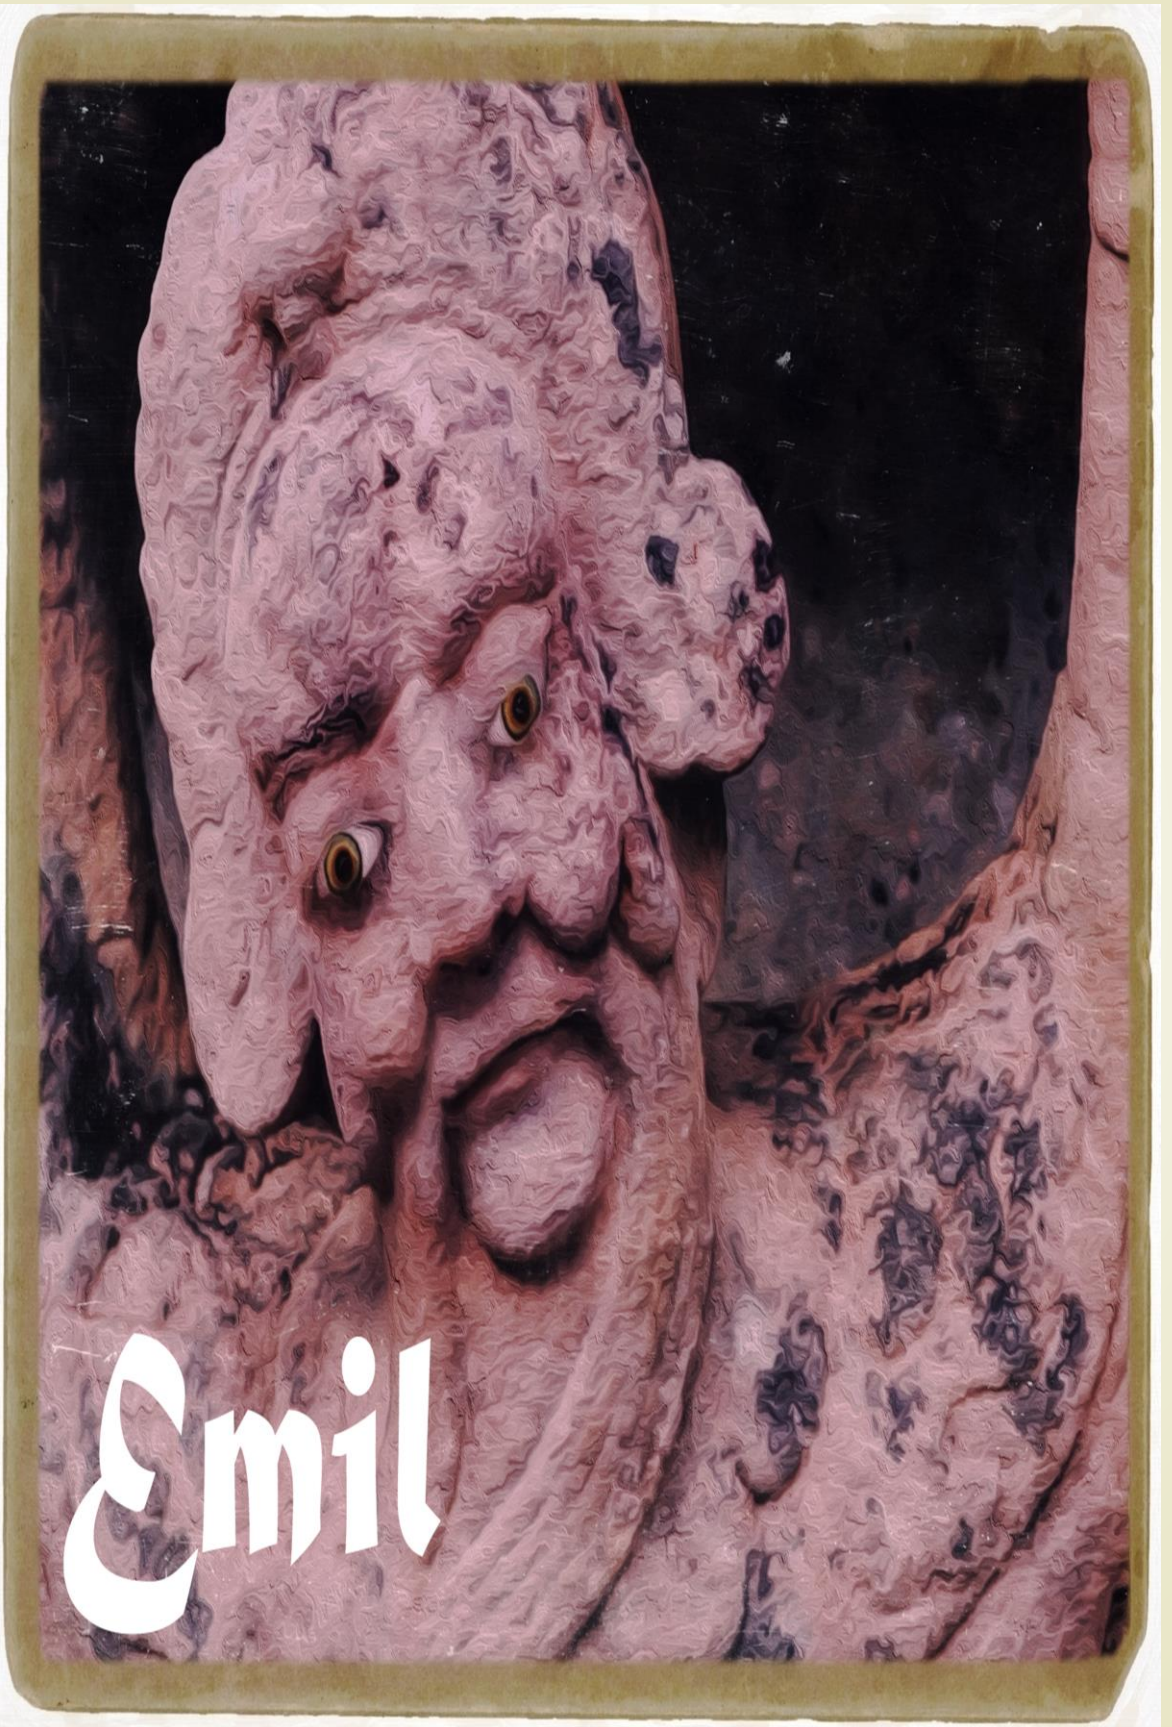

It is troubling, the current mindset amongst all these self-proclaimed elitist, the "In order to save American...we must destroy America" crowd that seem so earnest on making good on this pledge...they really do scare me more than the Commies and Nuclear Destruction ever did. Think, I will end this now!

"The whole idea that this death thing that we call it, is just a change of frequency, which it actually, obviously is."

She said with a true sense of concern not well hidden nor disguised by the low tone of her whispering voice, with her eyes glued on the café's main entrance and occasioning scanning the rest of the room for any seeming danger or threat.

"I should not be here, I should have not agreed to meet with you but, the professor said that I should contact you if..."

"If he disappeared?"

"Yes, that is what he instructed me to do?"

"How long has he been missing?"

I didn't bother to ask for details as I assumed that there would be none...he was just gone and as I had predicted, he no longer walks amongst us...not in freedom, at least.

"It's like the film, 'Men who stare at goats', about the experiments of the US army in the 50's, trying to get men to train to be able to run through walls, because there was all this knowledge they realized about changing frequency and vibration, you can actually blend with a tree, walk through walls, it's as the professor had explained to you, it all about a change of frequency, a change of vibration."

"Yes, that was the conversation..."

"I really feel there is a place in the education system all over the World for this re-calibration and rethinking of what people call death and really allowing people to cope with it."

"I'm sorry...do you believe that he is dead?"

"He feared that and he had read several of your books and felt that with your rather odd character, that you were our last hope..."

"Last hope...for what?"

"The truth and to get it out there for others to seek out and continue the work that we started..."

"You worked with the professor...at the university?"

"I was his lead lab assistant."

"So what is the truth?"

"You must be aware of the great discoveries that we were on the verge of...don't you?"

I nodded and she seemed to breathe a little easier although you could cut her fear with the butter knives that sat on the table next to freshly made bread that had just been served. I love the smell of freshly baked bread more than just about anything.

As a child, everyone joked that in a previous life, I must have been from Northern France...Brittany...famous for their freshly, homemade bread mixed with the tanginess of the region's ham and bean soups – which, I am too, I am very fond of.

"One thing I have found about Death, dealing with people in a therapy situation is the terrible weight and burden people carry with regret. Someone dies, changes frequency, transforms and is no longer accessible to us in the physical form, that if they have regrets they never did the things they wanted to do, they left on bad terms, they hadn't been speaking for years or the death was a little bit traumatic, it leaves a stress, a trauma around it."

Not getting the deeper meaning(s) to what she was saying and assuming she was talking of the professor and who, you could tell that she was more than fond of, regardless that she was many years his junior, I tried to show a little compassion for her true state of grief...

"Well the trauma can be healed, the trauma can be dealt with, but I do find people have been slowly destroyed by regret around death."

"Yes, so true but, think about what I just told you, study my words deeper...in more detail, truly take a few moments to think about what I just told you!"

"Sorry?!? Sweetheart, we are all dying a little every day, it is all about learning and moving forward...look at yesterday, I couldn't tie the laces of my shoes and today I can! It is all part of a deeper, a more natural cycle."

Maybe, I shouldn't have used "sweetheart" as you could tell immediately that this phraseology was distasteful to her and I surely, I wasn't making a friend by using it but, I have always wanted to use it like I was some 1940's, crusty old private detective and had not meant it in the creepy, sexist way that she perceived it to be.

"I'm sorry, I didn't mean to offend!"

I tried to walk back my last comment by explaining to her that I am very well known for being insensitive, rude and for being without concern or compassion...that, this is who I am and like Popeye "I is what I is!"

She nodded, trying to put aside the unpleasantness and then something in her expressing transformed, she had changes frequencies, the conversation was over, and it had died a sad little death of its own, even before we could enjoy the freshly baked bread.

She rose and in a panic, made a dash towards the café's rear door without even a single word of goodbye.

How rude...I mean...like...I know that what I said was rude too but, really...it didn't raise itself to such a high level of response...did it?

Not even in this new age of "Me too!"

Just about then, over my left shoulder, another voice calls out to me and I see some rather big thugs...sorry, several large agents of what was it...?

Oh yes, they identified themselves as some kind of federal agent...they said but, it was lost to my present state of mind and I could only raise and nod and said...

"Whatz???"

It was at this point, that I realized that I had my back to the front door and had not seen their entrance into the café...

I was relieved that it had not been my comments that had sent her off in such a huff...she seemed like a descent sort of person and she was rather fond of the professor as was I.

Coming back to the present, I too seemed to have changed my own frequency as they sat down at the table, surrounding me...I quickly saw that there was no mistaking that there was no path of escape...SHIT!

"And, who are you again?"

"We are federal agents and would like to have a word or two with you...would that be possible?"

"If this is about those parking tickets...well! It wasn't even my car and I thought that he already paid them, anyway?"

"No sir, this isn't about parking tickets."

"You are with who? So, let me see if I understand this correctly, you guys all want to talk to me...right now, here...about what?"

"We would like to talk to you, in part, about the young lady who had just left?"

"Who???"

Their expressions, collectively, became much and you could just sense that they were not in the mood to be playing semantic word games with me...they didn't seem to be in the mood and somehow, they weren't buying into my Forest Gump impersonations and as I previously had said, they were rather large, ex-military merc types without any sense of humor...not a bit!

To be truthful, I had dealt with their type before...when the Mormon Defense League had come looking for me after I had ignored the Bishop's debt request letters asking me to come in and settle my issue of my back tidings...seems that I was like 43 years past due and the church seems to have this new policy of "no forgiveness."

Similar to this, the Mormon's Defense League showed up at the house, pounding loudly on my metal, fake wood looking front door and when I finally answered the door (if I hadn't, they would have quickly broken the door down...cheap construction), they wanted to come in for a "fellowship" meeting....

They didn't look like the neat, geeks with their bicycle helmets and skinny black ties that had previously came a knocking.

These guys piled out of a giant SUV with very darkly tinted windows like the Death Squads use to use in El Salvador and they looked like they were central casting for a back cover of 'Soldier of Fortune' magazine...

They wanted to come in and not being a total stranger to such late night visits, I didn't stutter, without showing fear, I looked them dead in the eye and said...

"He isn't home right now but, I can I take a message?"

They were, like these guys, were not thrown off their game and again insisted that I give them permission to enter.

I solved that by asking the lead thug...

"Do you have a warrant? If you have a warrant then, I will gladly let you in but, comrades, if you don't, I am rather busy and don't have the time. Thank you very much!"

I have nothing to lose, let's see if this is good for a twofer?

So, I repeated that very same conversation, word by word, to the leader of these federal agents with a straight face and without the slightest clue that I was about to pee my pants. They looked confused and glanced back-and-forth to each other before the head guy said...

"We would just like to ask you some questions?"

OH BOY!

That is how it all started with the Trump

Campaign Boys and then, down the road they were all indicated in the Great Russian Conspiracy...facing three hundred years in a max security prison for past due parking tickets...sing or compose fellow or we will rot you away in a small cell with Big Daddy! See that's how it works...I watched it all play out for the Donald's previous campaign staff, it was all there on Fox News!

"Thanks but, I am gonna take a pass on this unless you have a warrant..."

"Warrant? We just want to have a nice conversation with you and all I hear is some guilty guy asking about warrants. Ya got a good lawyer, dude?"

"A lawyer? Do I need a lawyer? Are you detaining my officer? If not, please leave me to enjoy what is left of my meal...See you when you do have a warrant and I will be happy to have this nice conversation...Oh Yea! My lawyer will be there too...have a good day!"

It worked!

They left in a huff but, not before turning over the water glass on my table to show me that they had the power to do that.

I felt safe in doing this because my cousin, a rather good corporate lawyer, had always told me that if I volunteer any information or even identify myself, I lose all of my rights under the privacy laws.

I know that you are confused, "Don't you have to show an officer your identification when they request?"

Perry, the lawyer, said that is a police, urban myth as I have the right to privacy, only when and if, I am legally detained by that officer, do I need to provide my ID.

The trick is to not be bluffed by the officer into surrendering your right to privacy and you do that by merely asking...

"Am I being detained? Are you detaining me?"

Seems that there is a legal difference between detained and arrested that most people get confused...

The main thing is that if you don't call his/her bluff and use the magic words, you are at their mercy.

Now, be warned!

This does not mean that in real life, that they will not beat the shit out of you and then charge you with resisting arrest...assaulting a police officer and as many other charges that they can get to stick to the mud of the legal system's wall...300 years' worth of charges for past due parking tickets.

What shit have stepped into?

The clue is to never get out of the boat, never talk to strangers seems to be the deeper, the moral lesson to be learned here.

Hope you took notes.

I finished my meal and took the long way home.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is to advise you that Emil is not a lawyer and as such, WWWG is not liable for your usage of this information or your decision to act upon its suggestions – as your millage might differ.

Besides, Emil's cousin was/is a convicted crook having served time in a federal prison (near Tucson, Arizona) for his part in the Western Saving & Loan Banking Scandal of the 1990's.

Seems Perry was a cracker jack, a big honcho in corporate law, working as Mister Keating's lawyer and was indicated as a co-conspirator in civil fraud and racketeering charges amounting to over the 2.6 billion dollars lost and that in the end, it cost taxpayers well over 1.7 billion in restitution to all those greedy, well-heeled Sun City Seniors who didn't ask too many questions, literally cued up and shamelessly cut in line to invest their money freely when they were offered twenty plus percentage returns on their initial investments...when standard rates were hovering at around a measly, 5 percent return. So, I see it both ways!

To his credit, never ever in his, he never made excuses and never asked for forgiveness like all of the other players including Old Grand Daddy McCain who was best known for his part in the corruption scandal of paying off Senators, the Keating Seven they were called, if I correctly remember.

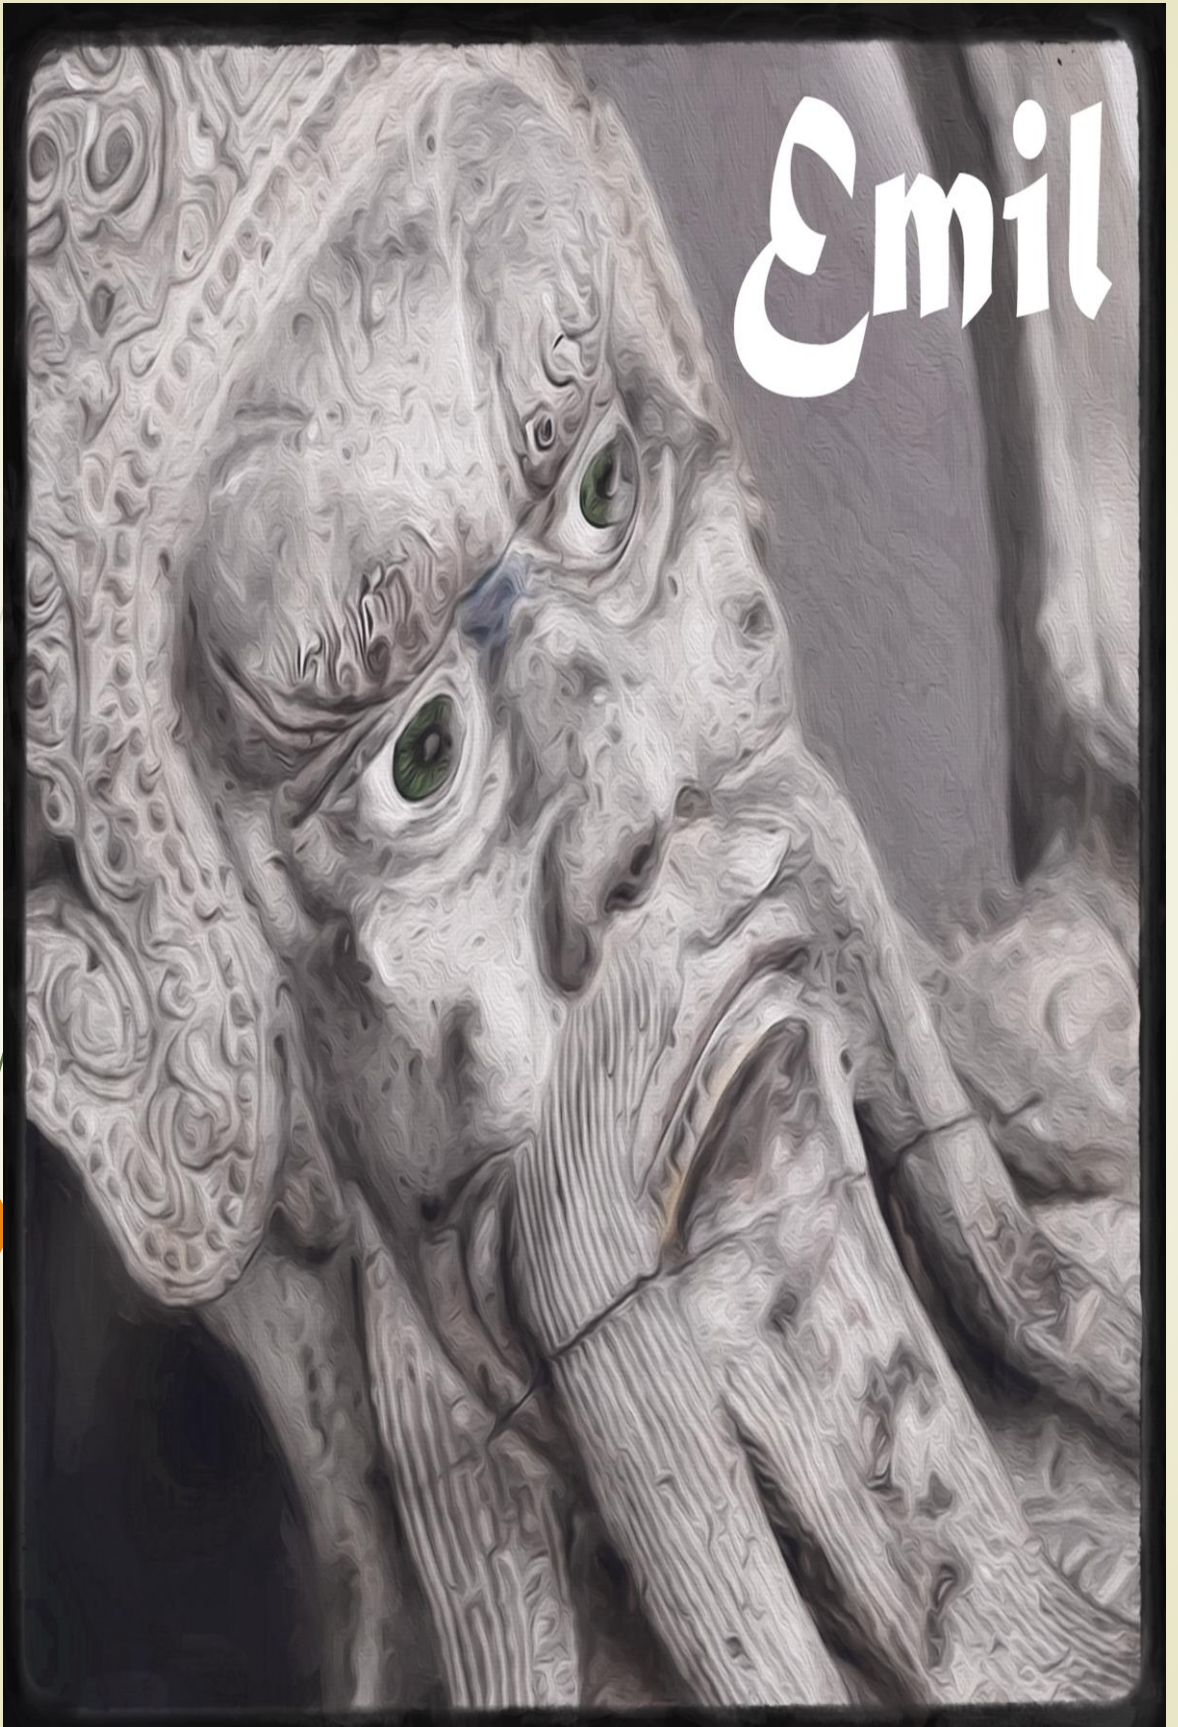

Hope that Emil will some day elect to write more about Perry as he is an interest character not a cardboard character, not a TV Lawyer but, a multi-layered person who was a master of the law. They tried to de-bar him three times and he beat them every time...while serving his time in a federal prison. Crackerjack!

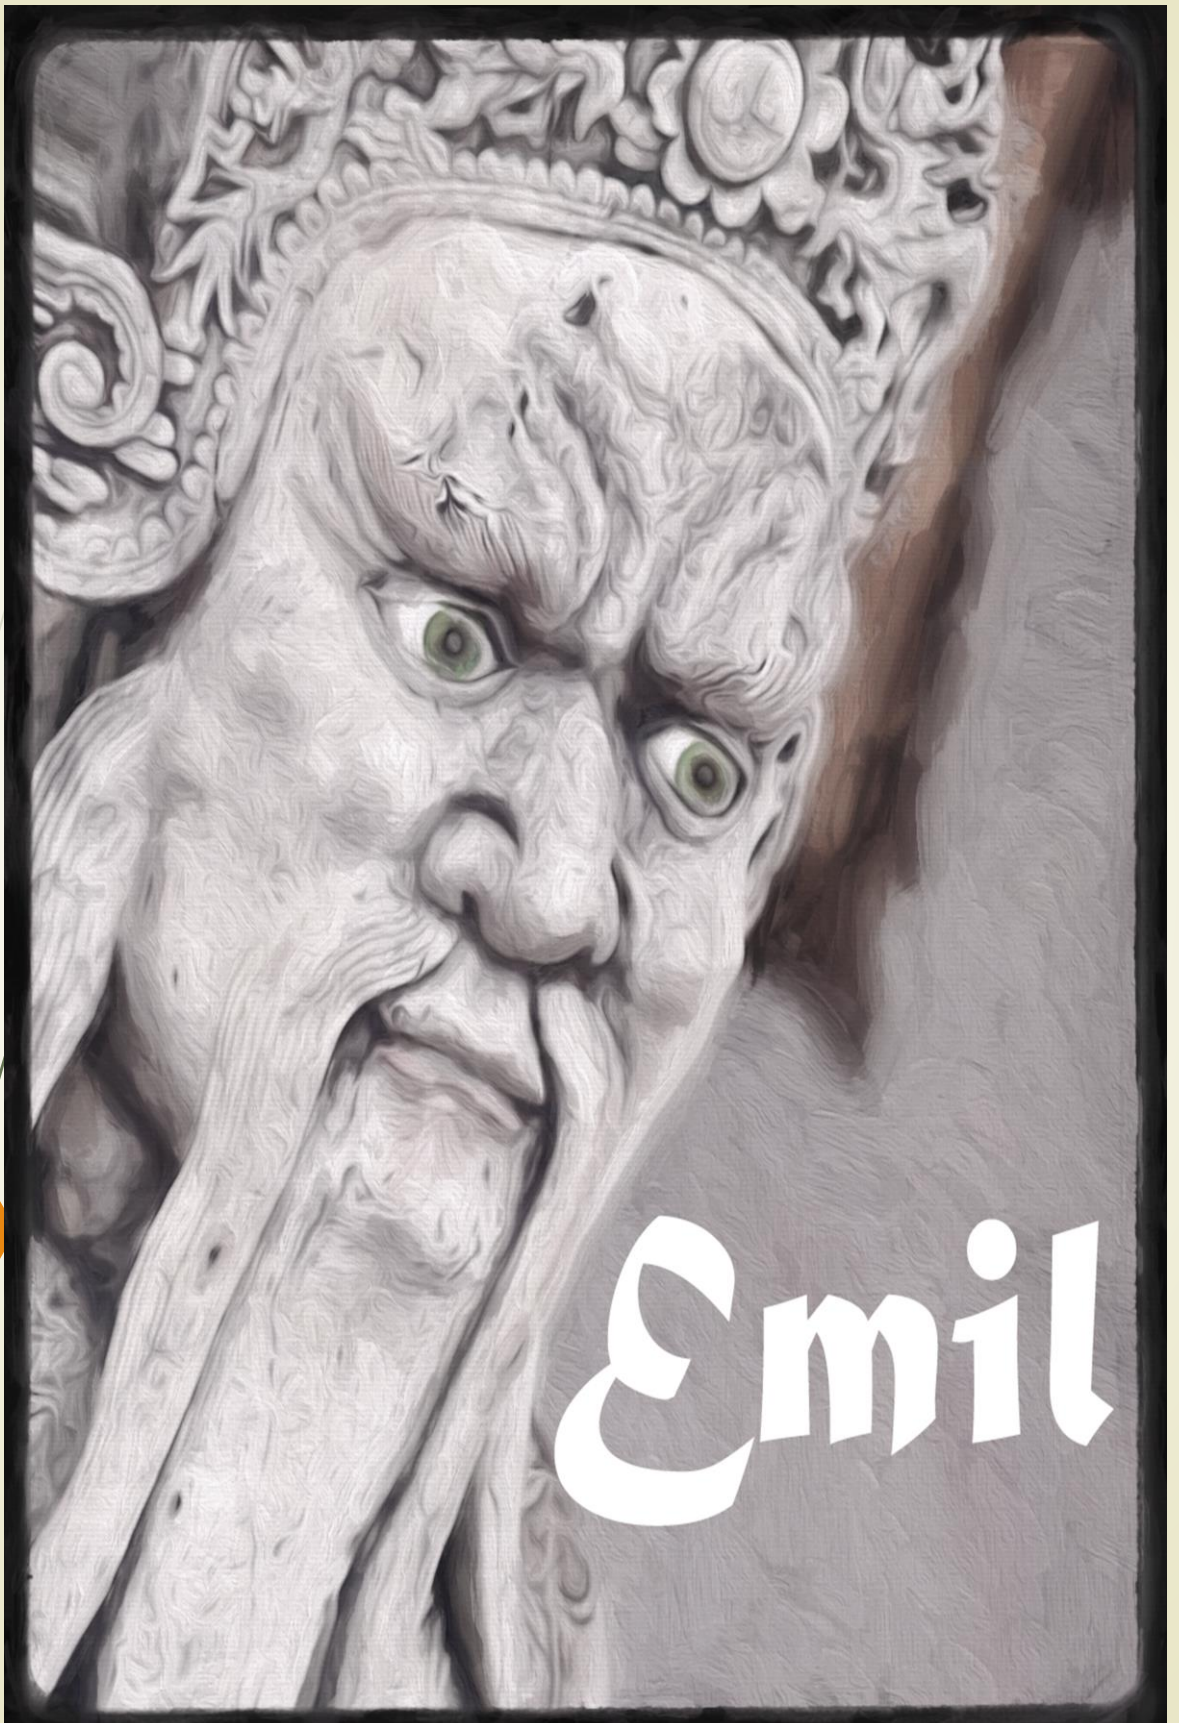

HINT...HINT!

"The Matrix is everywhere."

This has become rather a popular and surprisingly, it has become a main stage, mainstream interest and even the established, tenured professors with extended academic pedigrees and multiple diplomas decorating their study's wall, even they are sounding like Ray Bradbury and have bought into this whole concept that we are but, God's own version of SimPeople...a video game, a computer program or the one that directly caught my close attention was that the universe is just a mirror image, we are but a mere hologram.

The other interest story was the scientific researchers who claim that they have recently discovered computer algorithms hidden in the Big Bang's star dust or something or more to that effect, I was passing by and they had NPR on their radio scanner, so who knows?

After the events and incidents of the past weeks has turned me from being a true skeptical truth monger, I might be ready to take a second look at all of this...

What you think?

"It is all around us. Even now, in this very room. You can see it when you look out your window or when you turn on your television. You can feel it when you go to work, when you go to church, when you pay your taxes. It is the world that has been pulled over your eyes to blind you from the truth..."

Morpheus' speech was just thought to be good Sci-Fi...who knew that in a short period of real world time (10 years isn't it?) he would be proven to have been the true prophet instead of the Kung-Fu fighting machine that they promoted him to be...go figure?

You must remember?

Morpheus was never seen as the true hero due to the movie's focus on loveable Neil but, in fact he was overlooked for what he really was, he was a modern day...

he was that good knight seeking out truth and its purity while traveling about the Matrix as part of his lonely grail search, he was in the end, he was the gatekeeper to this truth in the movie and thus, the Matrix may have been more correct than even the most tin foiled hatter would not dare to imagine.

We think we live in a "world".

According to my friend, the currently missing professor's opinion and he had the research to back it up...at least, until he was Googled and spirited of a remote venue, out towards where Omar's Garden was claimed to be hid and buried whole.

In fact, we do live in a frequency range.

That's all it is.

We are trapped in a frequency range and therefore trapped in an illusion.

This is what the well-known movie calls the Matrix.

The professor was on the verge of being able to prove that the "world" we see around us is merely the tiny fraction of multi-dimensional infinity that our physical senses of sight, hearing, touch, smell, and taste can access.

The physical world we perceive is like a radio station and our physical senses are tuned to its frequency.

So that is all we see.

But all around us are the other frequencies or densities of infinite creation -the ones that "science" has denied exist little-a-lone the parallel universes and the spirit world...as ancient cultures often taught.

It all seems to be very fitting, as this all ties directly into the pseudo-science of Quantum Physics.

Which seems so, it in itself seems rather funny because the concepts we, now, are so are lining up to embrace and proclaim as our new dharma, it is indeed funny to know that this science's core roots came out of the 1940s and again, it even more funny that it came from Nazi Germany as their counter answer to what the German Government classified as Einstein's (Jewish) Theory of Relativity.

But it must be noted in all fairness that this was the scientific base for all the technological advanced that the German Scientist were to go on and create in the war years.

Had the Nazis not come to power and had people like Einstein not been forced to immigrate to America, many have pondered were we would be by now, what the world would have been like and they all spend countless hours lost in day dreams as to the wonders that might have been created...

In fact, I submit that this argument is like totally, so bogus and like the previous incarnation of the well repeated, the urban legend from the First Great War about what Europe would have become if the cream of that generation's youth had not died and had their bones scattered out amongst the poppy fields of Flanders or blow away, up on the strong western winds of the era.

First of all, my fellow campers, the cream of that generation it was not, most of that generation that perished out in the trenches, there were (on both sided) merely poor, factory blokes desperately trying to escape the miseries of their 14 hour days down at the mills, the screaming complaints of ungrateful wives and the disrespect and mockery from their unruly children.

The way many of them actually saw it, it was truly better to have a quick death up at the Front rather than a lingering, daily death over the next 40 plus years, endlessly slaving away their best years for pennies a day, stuck down in some dark, damp factory floor making widgets for which they could not afford to buy and that their wives endlessly and so bitterly complaining that they didn't make enough money to purchase.

The whole setup of labor in the Industrial Revolution was wicked, cruel and if there was a true God...an Old Testament God, then, he would have quickly smited all of those factories, laid waste to the lot with fire and brimstone...thank you very much!

A real God would have heard the cries of his people and sent relief, a new Moses and then doubled down on their baron-like owners...instead he sent Lloyd George?

This makes you surely wonder and it hurts my head to pounder God's reasoning in all this.

To be blunt, to be always truthful to you, all of my dear readers, the little, the tiny bit of the urban legend's cream that actually came up to the war, were there for photo ops and speeches about how we needed to give our lives so that the rich in England could continue to remain rich, happy and until this day, ungrateful to the common lot who actually did give up their lives daily.

I witnessed them up there in the northern trenches, to almost a man, I don't mean to be disrespectful to my societal betters (that is how they actually referred to themselves...really!) but, they truly deserved what they got or in some cases, what we gave to them.

"The bloody fool and his whistle, that upper class captain with the expensive, silk neck scarf...you remember him, don't you Seine?"
What a fool!

I can't remember how many times his stupidity, lack of common sense nearly cost us our lives in his quest for glory and a medal that would guarantee him a lifetime appointment to the Foreign Office.

None of us were sad, not a tear was shed by his unit as he raised his pistol, tooted his stupid little whistle once and fell dead, stuck by a stray round (at least that was the collective believe that went up for the Colonel's review) as he tried to lead a charge up over the top and out into the killing fields of no-man's land...life expectancy out there was thirty seconds...max!

Not a tear,

Not a single one...

Mind ya, it was true!

In fact, I believe I might have actually heard a few muffled cheers!

The whole "what if" movement and the cottage industry of creative spirits that fuel it with all of these Utopian, hashish-stained, all of these dysfunctional day dreams but, sometimes interesting alternative histories are but, a rich man's escape – poor men (people) have not the time to leisurely lay-a-bout and pounder what the world would be like...had Hitler been Jewish?

Had the Nazis not came to power, Einstein might never have rose up to his superstar status with his involvement in the Atom Projects, had the Nazis not come to power, there would have been no holocaust (terrible to think #1) but, then again there would not be the State of Israeli or if there was, it would be situated somewhere deep in the heart of Africa much Lloyd George and his fellow Lords had originally planned it to be.

(#1) An old rabbi (who had, by the way, survived the death camps) explained to me that he believed that God had sent the Nazis to create the Holocaust in order that the prophetesses could be fulfilled and that there could be a re-creation of a Jewish Homeland in Palestine...He also thought, that the 1948 and 1967 wars of liberation were a gift from God to establish the framework for the rebuilding of the holy temple and that this was the event that would usher in the coming of the Messiah.

There would have not been the genetics breakthroughs or cloning and I would imagine, that Quantum Physics, advanced defense, killing technologies, even nuclear power and the space program would have never been funded with unlimited capital budgets and the world today might have only reached 1950s levels of technology.

The war and the events of the time created the need and the needs morphed into what we reflect to be the mainstream of our technological society in which we live.

Or do we?

It is now commonly believed by a growing number of leaders in the scientific fields that these alternative universes are all around us on frequencies beyond the range of our physical senses.

These are the frequencies that can be seen and heard by animals, like cats, when they react to apparently "empty" space, and dogs when they hear sounds far higher than we can. Newborn babies also react to "empty" space until their senses are imprisoned by conditioning.

These are the frequencies accessed by true psychics -the oracles of the ancient world -who can raise their vibration to tune into these unseen realms.

"...a good 90% of total calculated mass is in fact dark and unobservable, while only 10% is observable by means of the infinite rainbow, which is light. The visible universe we do observe, with its billions of stars and galaxies, is in turn only a narrow perspective of this already scanty 10%. ...Inside every physical body there is an invisible, but far more massive reality (90%), a non-observable substance, that can be felt and experienced as emotions, intuitions, and feelings."

David Ickes said that it is within the realms of this unseen "dark matter" that other-dimensional entities like the reptilians operate. It was pointed out to me when I mention these fact recently while waiting for the bus to arrive, that in some galaxies, this dark matter, unseen by the human eye, is 100 times the mass we can observe.

We can see from our frequency range just 7% of what exists in such galaxies!

When we open our minds and expand our own frequency range of perception, so we will "discover" more planets and stars.

The atom is said to be the foundation of physical matter and yet all but a fraction of the space within an atom is, to the human eye, "empty".

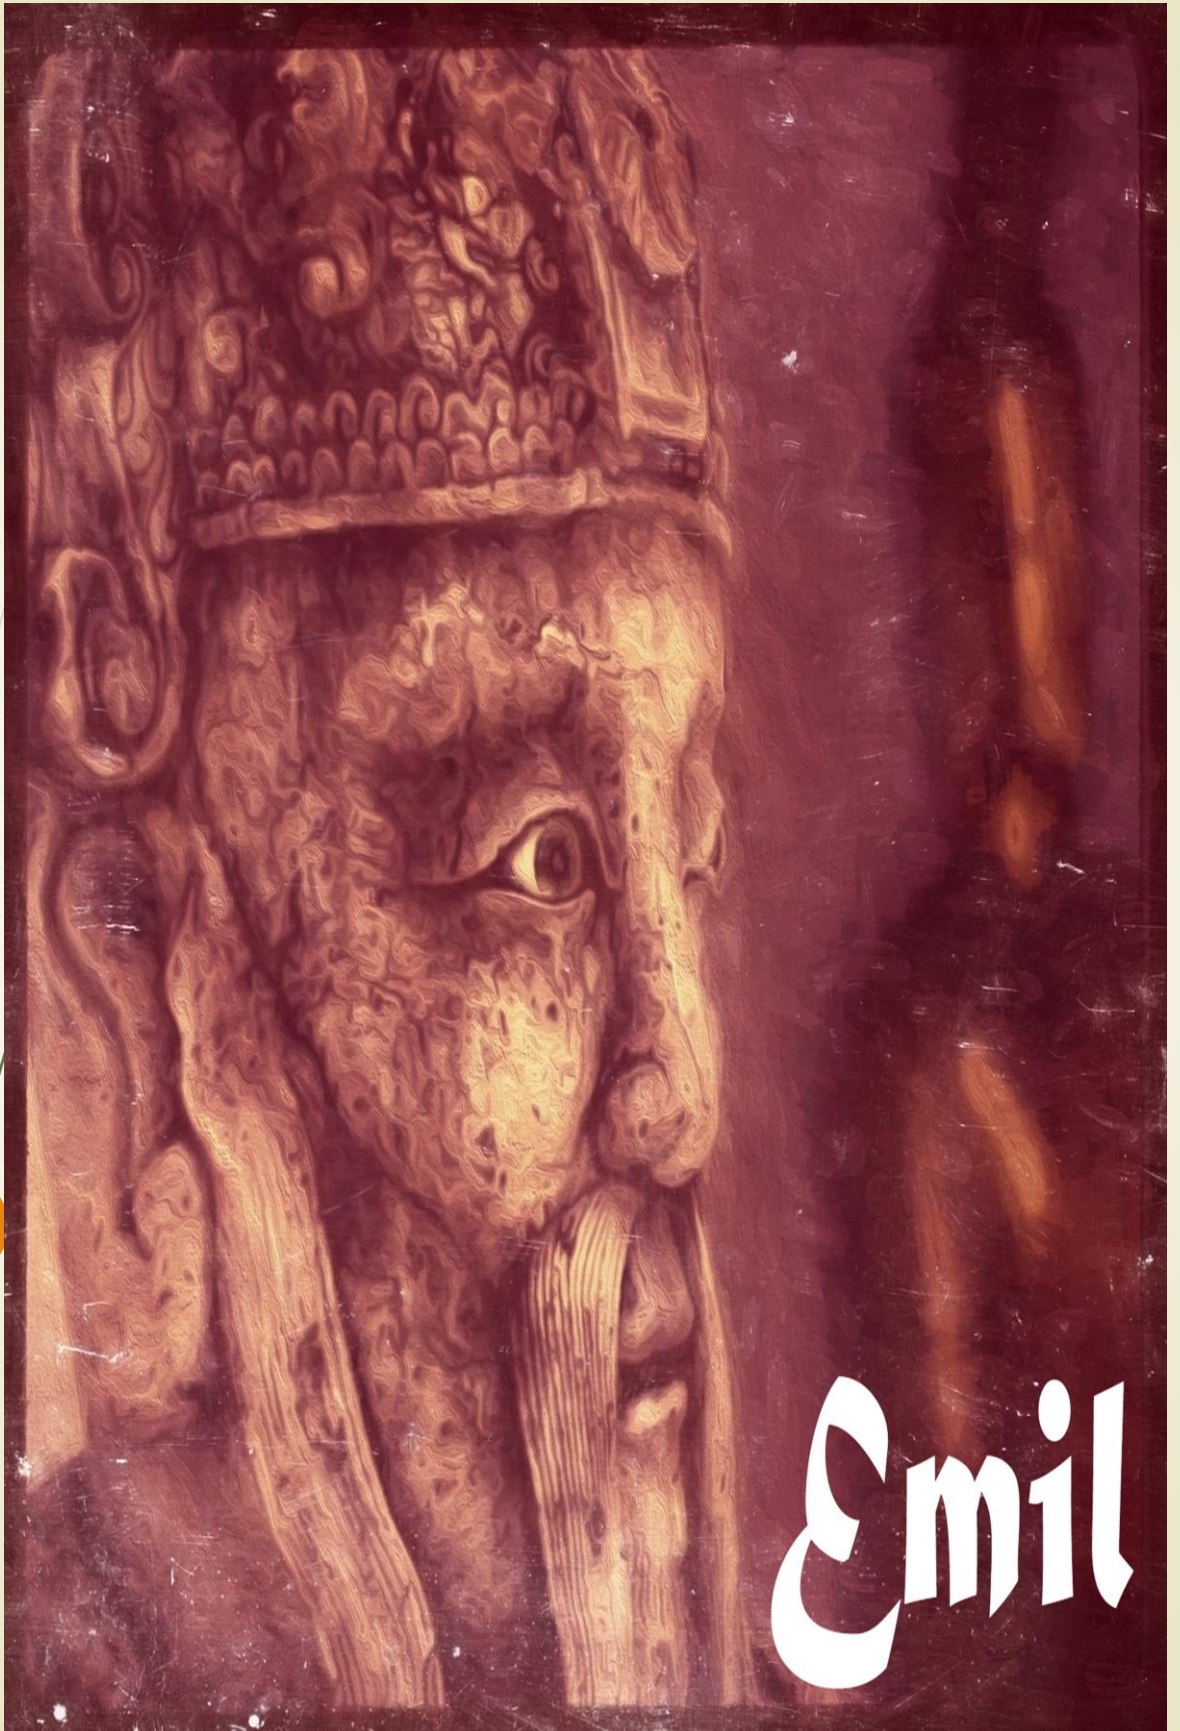

A "physical atom" from which all physical forms are made, consists of a nucleus with electrons orbiting around it like a mini solar system like the Russian Dolls...

(Opps! Did I freely mention Russia?)

You know the ones where one fits inside the next and that one fits inside the next...for or to infinity...

Maybe, back?

Individually and some would openingly whisper that there is a collective coconsciousness to truth and it is sad that the collective so fears retribution that they stay hidden away in the little rooms, minding what they assure themselves that is truly "not their business!" and they never dare to go to the rooftop and have their own Howard Beale, shaking their clinched fist out to the universe and just once scream "I'm mad as hell and I'm not gonna take it anymore!!!"

Most of you are too young to have known, little alone appreciate this character from the 1970s, but, Bill Hicks was a raw, exposed nerve to the establishment, corporatization of the Music Industry and, by the way, was beyond funny...he was profound!

The AM Top Forty wasn't much into him and you rarely heard his music except late at night or up on bootleg FM stations of that era but, I remember scanning the dial and by accident tuned into Bill Hicks singing and in this, it was my first introduction to a deeper current, a more but hidden truth...this was one of those Road to Damascus movements even though I was on the road to Tulsa and had spent most of the evening back at a truck stop nearer to the Kansas Border, we had been drinking Wild Turkey with Flo, Chester and few other new friends that I had just meet and as I tried to find a traveling song, this is when Dan Hicks voice rang out in clear...

"We are the imagination of ourselves. Our lives, our physical experience, are a manifestation of our thoughts. We are what we think we are. Our imagination of self and the world around us becomes our physical experience. You think you are ordinary? You will be "ordinary". You think you are powerless? You will be powerless. You think the best things in life happen to others? So they will."

So they will!

For some even stranger reason, I started to recall a story that I had read from a copy of Newsweek that someone had left in the john (bathroom) back at the truck stop, they were quoting some dude by the name of Dr. Baker (I think that was his name...it's been a long time so forgive me if I got that wrong)

"If we expanded the hydrogen atom to the size of a cathedral, its electron would perhaps be the size of a nickel!"

What that means to the current conversation here is that the overwhelming majority of the "space" within an atom is "dark matter" operating on frequencies we can't see and it is the same with our solar system and the entire dense physical universe.

According to our missing professor from Moscow University told us, if only "science" were led by our way of thinking, instead of the concrete minds that block and battle anything that they didn't themselves proposed, this bastion of mainstream academia, we would already live in a world of infinitely greater awareness of who we are and the nature of life.

Remember, the professor's work indicates that only a fraction of 10% of total mass that we can currently see might turn out to be an extremely optimistic view.

"The kingdom of heaven is within you!"

The old-time preacher man was righty but, he got it reason why wrong and then, he added a taste of evil and damnation to help spice up the collection plate's draw. What he could never imagined was that or for that case, could have anyone guessed that all around you now, and sharing the same space as your body, are all the radio and television frequencies broadcasting to your area. You can't see them and they are not aware of each other because they are vibrating to such different frequencies that they pass through each other and your body without anyone noticing.

The only time they "interfere" with each other is when they are very close on the frequency band.

When you turn on your radio, the frequency you have accessed is passing through the windows and walls of your house to reach the radio receiver because the walls and broadcast frequencies are so far apart on the density scale.

This is how "ghosts" and "extraterrestrials" can apparently walk through walls and why some people see them and others don't. It depends whether your mind is tuning to their frequency or not.

These other-dimensional entities, including the reptilians, are all around us sharing the same space.

You can sometimes feel them when the vibes in a room change and you sense an icy chill or, with positive entities, a feeling of great love in the atmosphere around you.

They are so close to our frequency range, but just outside it.

James, our profound and always on mark, our former guru talked of the vibrational "blind spot" that people have which prevents them from seeing these entities and I think this is manufactured externally in some way, probably through a frequency broadcast from below ground that shuts off part of our DNA's multi-dimensional potential.

The DNA is a transmitter and receiver of vibrational information and can therefore be reprogrammed by vibrational and electromagnetic fields.

Nikola Tesla, whose genius was responsible for much of today's electrical system, understood that other frequencies existed, but the most profound parts of his work were suppressed...

"We cannot even with positive assurance assert that some of them (other dimensional entities) might not be present here in our world in the very midst of us, for their constitution and life manifestations may be such that we are unable to perceive them."

Earlier on this road trip, when I was moving the radio dial (they used to have dials that needed to be turned) trying to tune to another station, you can no longer hear the first station because you have moved the dial out of its range and so now you are hearing another. But the first station has not disappeared, it goes on broadcasting maybe, even until today but, I would dare say that Dan Hicks was no longer on their playlist..

It's just that you can't hear it anymore.

If you choose to retune your dial again, there it will be.

Our Guru James explained that it is the same with Creation. He said that "We are like droplets of water in an ocean of infinite energy taking infinite forms."

He taught us that this ocean of energy manifests as different densities or frequencies and at this moment we are tuned to this one, the "physical world".

But all the other frequencies are around us and interpenetrating us while we perceive only the density that our physical senses can see, touch, hear, smell, and taste -the Matrix.

"The fact that we are not able to observe it doesn't mean it doesn't exist, rather that human perception is severely limited."

Which loops us back to our good buddy, the late and great Bill Hicks...

"Matter is merely energy condensed to a slow vibration. We are all one consciousness experiencing itself subjectively. There's no such thing as death, life is just a dream and we are the imagination of ourselves."

Look, I understand that this seems like some egg-head Sci-Fi but even Albert Einstein's $E=MC^2$ shows that matter is just a form of energy and that energy cannot be destroyed, only transformed into another state.

Its official, our consciousness, which is energy, is indestructible.

We live forever.

The truth is in front of our eyes.

Purely by changing the temperature (frequency), ice becomes water and water becomes steam and steam "disappears" like our missing professor.

That simple temperature change turns "solid" ice into invisible vapor because different temperatures represent different frequencies. It is all the same energy, but in a very different state.

Our bodies consist of many different sub-frequencies within the dense physical range. Look at X-rays.

They are tuned to frequencies that match our bone structure and so they do not portray the outer flesh, which is vibrating to a different frequency.

X-rays don't show the walls of buildings, just the rods of iron within them for the same reason. Look at the world from the X-ray frequency and it looks very different than it does from ours. How an object or person appears depends purely on the frequency from which you are observing.

The human aura, as technology has shown, is a mass of different colors (frequencies) that change as our thoughts and emotions (frequencies) change.

The X-ray is just one example of frequencies that science has confirmed exist, but we can't see.

Ultraviolet, gamma-rays, infra-red, radio waves, etc., are some of the others.

But had you suggested any of this to a conventional, tenured, scientist who is for the most part supported only by funders with the deepest pockets, state sponsorships or some kooky billionaire trying to promote whatever, if you had or if you would approach any of them with any of this, they would scream to high heaven calling your theories ridiculous or National Enquire dangerous, they would swiftly assemble of fellow minded academics vested to maintaining the status quo and they would descend down on you with long knives slicing atoms out of the air in an earnest effort to dismiss you back into the discredit ranks of the tin foil hatters for which they claim you ascended and to where you need to be cast back into..

Such has been the faith of an academic maverick, any free thinker and if we were back in previous ages, we would have been burned at the stake without a second thought for all of our Satan-inspired mumbo-jumbo, it would be said before they put an end to such nonsense talk with a quick whack of the hangman's blade, they would tell the world that we were possessed by demons from the deepest pits of hell even though they couldn't tell us where Hell really was.

There are always those leaders of the church of Saul (not the church of Jesus...they are very different but, even today might get you put away for saying) some who claim it is...it is always some place they deem wicked, like Cleveland.

In fact, every scientific norm since the dawn of the scientific age has been proved with time to be either flawed, not the full picture, or, often, unbelievably inaccurate and patently ludicrous but, were defended by the loyal, the faithful Clerics of Science, as total truth and willing to give their life to defend the standards as accepted, unquestionable logo, they blindly accepted what is told them by their scientific betters and it is only after another generation or so, that the old truths are nothing but an old joke about how stupid people were back in the day.

Think Campers!

What this means in simple truth is that everything that was, it is no more...just a bad notion that needs to be written out of the history and swiftly dismissed, dispatched with haste off into to the dustbins (shredders) of history.

I know a professor who, at the start of each new semester, he would forewarn any new student that any mention of the untested science of Plate Tectonics would result in an immediate failure!

Even though, he was hard pressed to explain sea shells found on Mount Everest other than a biblical flood depositing them there, how the continents seemed, they looked like a broken jig-saw puzzle where all the pieces clearly interconnected and if they were, what drove them apart other than to create a theory of great gas chambers that acted like sinkholes but on a continental basis – which seemed to explain the creation of the oceans and you wonder why people in Florida spent a good deal of their free time worried about sinkhole.

"OH my God! Marge, there is the start of new ocean opening up... out here in the backyard...we need to start packing...tell the neighbors we are getting out of here before all of Florida falls into the sea...call the folks and let them know that we are coming back home to the high ground around Cleveland!"

Cleveland?

*"Hey, wasn't that where the preacher claimed that hell was? They are going home?
They are going back to Hell?
I told ya that them damn Yankees were a strange lot!"*

Anyway, when did all of this occur? Was it...

1900?

1920?

1950?

No this was deep into the 1970s and it would be not until the next generation that Plate Tectonics would be taught in every school as standard curriculum, the new logo...the dharma, the truth and anyone who dared recall the previously accepted truths was solely dismissed as just plain sad! Confused?

"Yet generation after generation society clings to the scientific norms of its day until its knuckles turn white and its hair turns grey."

Albert Einstein once wrote that...

Science goes on judging possibility by the apparent laws of this frequency range and yet scientists know that 90% of the mass of existence, what they call "dark matter", is not subject to these laws like gravity and those of the electromagnetic field.

If we take the laws of physics as they may apply to one frequency and judge what is possible in other frequencies on the same basis, we will be in ignorance forever. Thus, Quantum Mechanics and Parallel Universes are now no longer just a neat theme of the Sci-Fi Channel's TV series "Sliders" but, is technical possible if like our missing professor had mentioned that the key was to construction a sending/receiving deceive to fine-tune the frequencies like I did with that radio on the long drive to Tulsa...

See how it all comes together and like Colonel Smith use to say, "I love it when a plan comes together!"

Which leads me to explain why I have called you all here today. We have assembled to right a wrong that has gone unanswered for more than an eon and with this knowledge learned here we will be able to undo the wrong and set souls free from the limbo hell that they have lived, some for longer than a thousand years. What?

I can see that you are confused?

Remember back to a book (shameless plug, no doubt...sorry!) that I wrote about the lost Chinese City of Stone?

You do?

Give that guy over there in the back, give him some bonus points!

Let me explain that we discovered a lost city (more a rather large village) deep in the Southern Heartlands of China...near the current Nepalese Border.

We discovered that the city and its people were encased into stone. Understand how strange this sound and if I had not been guided there by several of the older local Shamans, I would not have believed it neither.

I spent a great deal of time documenting this find before we were forced to retreat because of the near approaching Chinese Border Patrol. The shamans later supplied us with several tablets and then later with a fragile scroll that reported to be a first-hand account of that day when the village was turned to stone by a great wizard and his army that invade from the south.

The scroll told of a great wizard that seems more like something out of Dungeons and Dragons, here you have this wizard dude who seems to have a fondness for long flowing robes, pointy, stovepipe hats and pointy slippers (their verbiage not mine) but, he had a god-like power to turn living matter into stone images of themselves.

The scroll goes on to say that if a city, town or village would submit, they would be spared and if not...no second warning...stonetown... Curiously, the Shamans pointed to the second tablet and when translated from a form of Pre-Sanskrit, it told of the true wickedness of the deed was that the process of converting the human flesh to stone was so swift that it trapped the soul from being released and ascended up to heaven.

So the victims' souls were trapped in a state of limbo for all time or it would be until, it was prophesized that there would come a day when, this science (technology) would be again known to mankind and each of these stone statues would be set free.

All at once or so it implied?

Suppose our missing professor was correct and that by controlling frequency you can control matter?

Think about this?

Could you not with mastery over this technology actually encase living matter into stone?

No, I am serious and I have spent most of the last month in additional research to explore the possibilities.

There are actual recorded events that have come down to us in this regards.

The great walls of Jericho fell down. The bible tells us that is so and they then go on to give us an unscientific expiation on how the invading (liberating) Israelis accomplished this might feat...it was with sound and vibration...

Sound familiar?

Remember the Philadelphia Experiments of the Second Great War?

They were using, depending on whose account you believe, frequencies to either make the ship invisible or to transport to like Telsa claimed, to another location.

Either way, while not understanding, at the time, that they had stumbled upon the creation of a crude broadcaster (able to transport frequency of the ship into another quantum level) the ship disappeared and then reappeared...at this point the story goes black and as only recently, has there been information available.

I doubt that with even within our generation will the full story be told.

What is rumored or stated as collect, sometimes deathbed confession's say that when the ship reappeared, the crew looked like bloody road kill or what caught my attention was the reports that there were crew members fussed into the ship's hull or steel beams.

Remember, our missing professor told us that they had not achieved (yet) the ability to transport live matter but, that structures and nonliving matter could be sent and received (data too if I recall correctly)...

Sound familiar?

There are numerous others that my research has stumbled upon in ancient myths and legends.

The early, Pre-Trojan War Greeks seem to have been familiar with this same technology and the timeline fairly well matches up with the creation Chinese Village of Stone.

The Medusa Legends come down to us and can be traced back to the same timeline. Now, there is an element of body shamming in that Medusa was not an attractive person and that it was her looks that could turn you to stone...so the legend goes.

What if the activity was true but, the reasoning into the methodologies of how it happened was not understood by the scribes that wrote down the orally handed down tales of Medusa?

What strikes me as even stranger is in how she is portrait with a head full of snakes.

What purpose or role did the snakes play?

Most good Christians (followers of the Church of Saul... aka...the Catholic Church...not to be confused with the much less known and funded the real Church of Jesus...) would see snakes and say she was of the devil...think?

But, in more ancient cultures, snakes are not evil but, represent knowledge, science and health. They are the bringers of civilization, culture and often advanced knowledge.

Maybe, the Greeks just had a thing about snakes and a head full of snakes would make Medusa pretty scary but even uglier...Think?

You want to go with that...is that your final answer?

Well Campers!

Let me throw into this mix that the Greeks like the Egyptians were heavily into symbolism – which means that everything you see might not be what they mean.

Here is my example that I hope that even John

Anthony West might raise an eyebrow to, if you look beyond the simplest “she was one ugly girl” (AKA...the old saying, looks can kill) theory and scold the Greeks for being responsible for bringing to the world body shamming, beauty pageant winners with big hair, plastic surgery and all the beauty is good culture that victimizes young women yet today.

If you understand what Professor West and others are telling us about ancient culture, back to a time and place that snakes were respected or at least given a pass, you could see that the snake represents knowledge, education and science.

If one snake is symbolic of this...remember there was only one snake in the Garden of Eden (didn't he have cousins and where were they?) Suppose, you have multiples?

Medusa had a whole head of them snakes and they were pretty damn active...I remember the 1950's movie about Jason and the Golden Fleece, they were very active well Jason is trying to slay (a nicer word than kill) Medusa. In actual Greek legends, I think it was Hercules that did the slaying.

Could this be that they were showing us that she had great knowledge, that she processed great and deadly technology that used frequency to change (encase) matter into stone?

I am just gonna go out on the limb and point blankly tell you all and just say out loud...big hair and dimples does not beauty make...it resides and glows from your soul...don't let the fashion industry tell you otherwise...it's just that you can't put lipstick on your soul or dress a good sense of humor in a $10,000 (USF) designer dress...

And once you embrace this truth, we will destroy a large segment of the world's already fragile economy as you will no longer need the vast majority of the products they try to sell you. That will mean that Mean Girls will just be mean and no longer be able to claim the social high ground or be mean merely because they are able to upscale you in their purchases from these industries. Equality is like school uniforms but, it is against our nature and I blame the damn Greek for starting this all by body shamming Medusa!

But, I hear ya!

This is all good, even somewhat interesting in a "B" level movie kind of way but, what does it have to do with this supposed City of Stone or for that matter, all the tea in China?

That part about "all the tea in China" I don't know how to ever start to address that issue...You might seek out professional help, I am sure that there are twelve step programs that address that?

But, if we could further our missing professor's research, we might be able to free these trapped souls...not saying that we can bring them back to life, they would take a lot of care, re-education and patience in adapting to this modern world.

Anyway, that technology is not yet here and we don't have the funds to further that as our goal. Besides right now, they would just be a bio-hazard, of freshly shredded road kill.

Now, I am not saying that someone needs to set me up a "GoFundMe" account nor to send donations...directly to me not WWWG (they are crooks)...

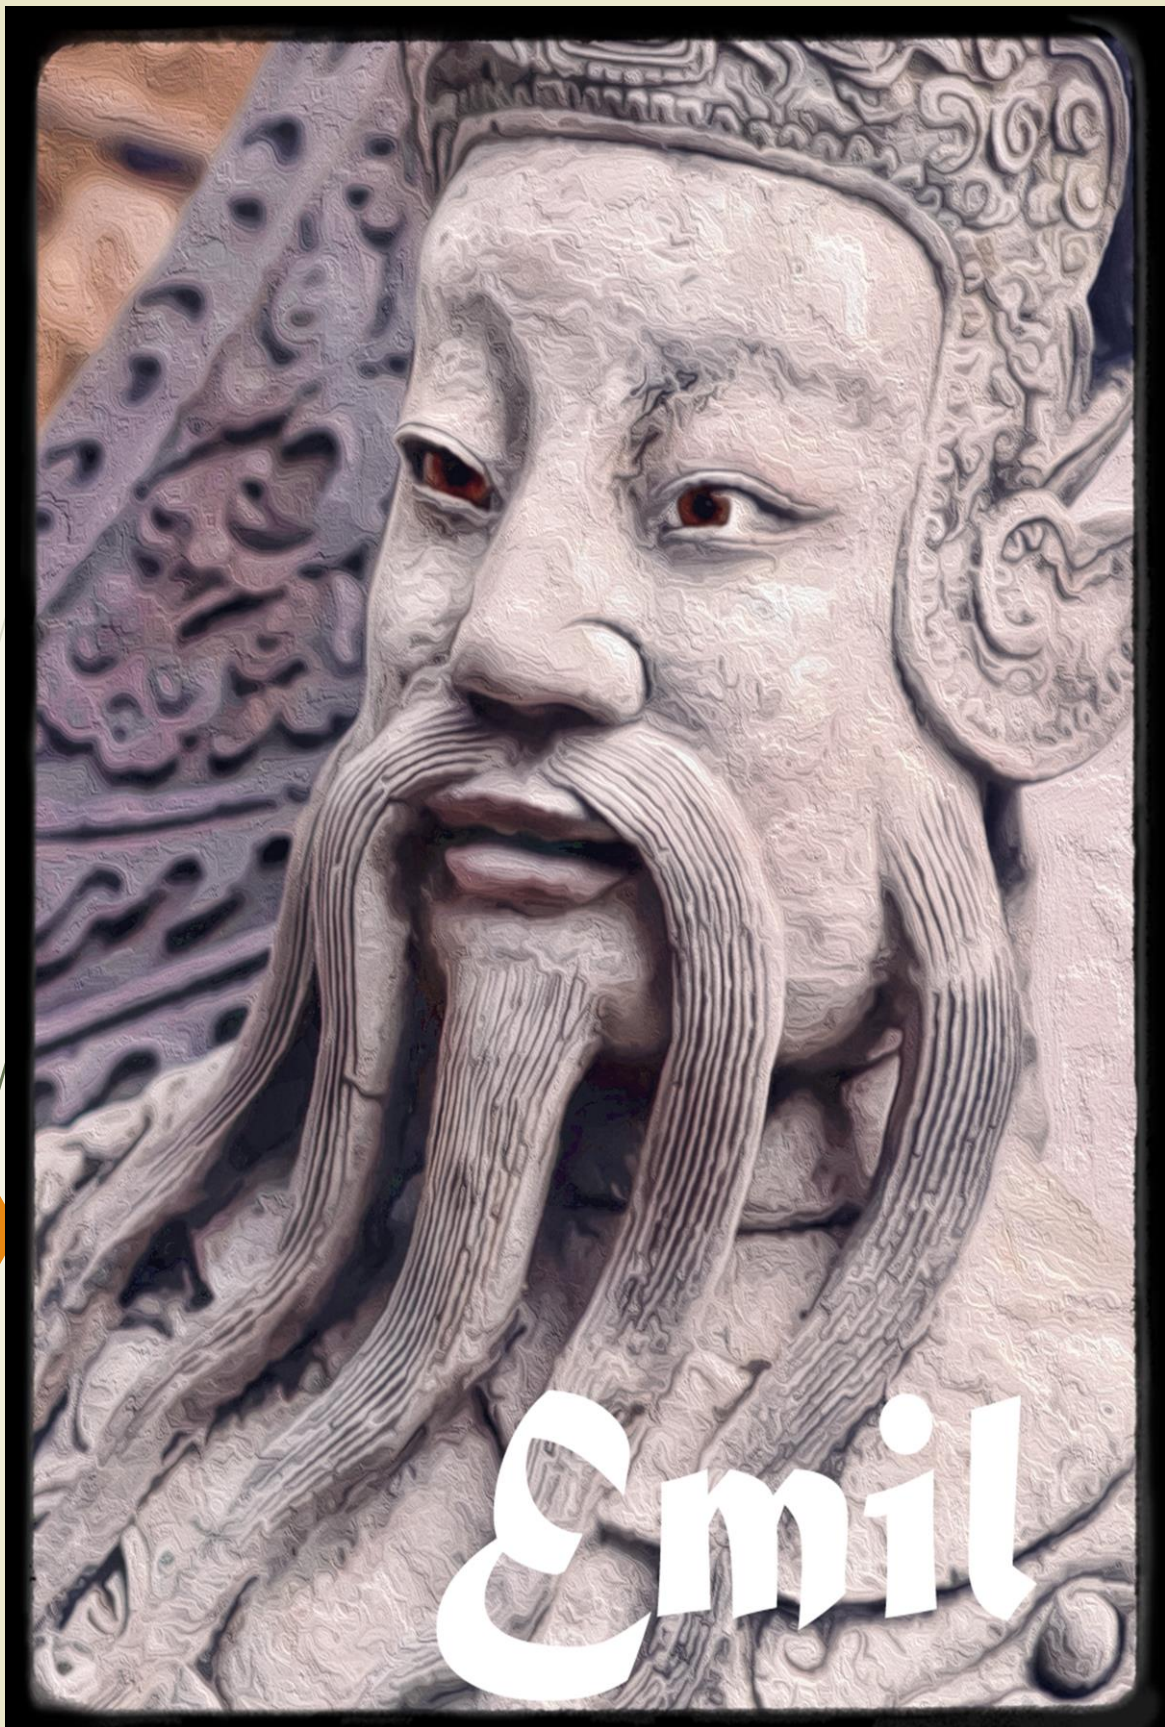

I'm not even implying that you should but, you are all grown, free agents and with such funds, I might be able to explore less messy approaches to freeing their souls...of creating a harmonic rapture of the victims of Stone City.

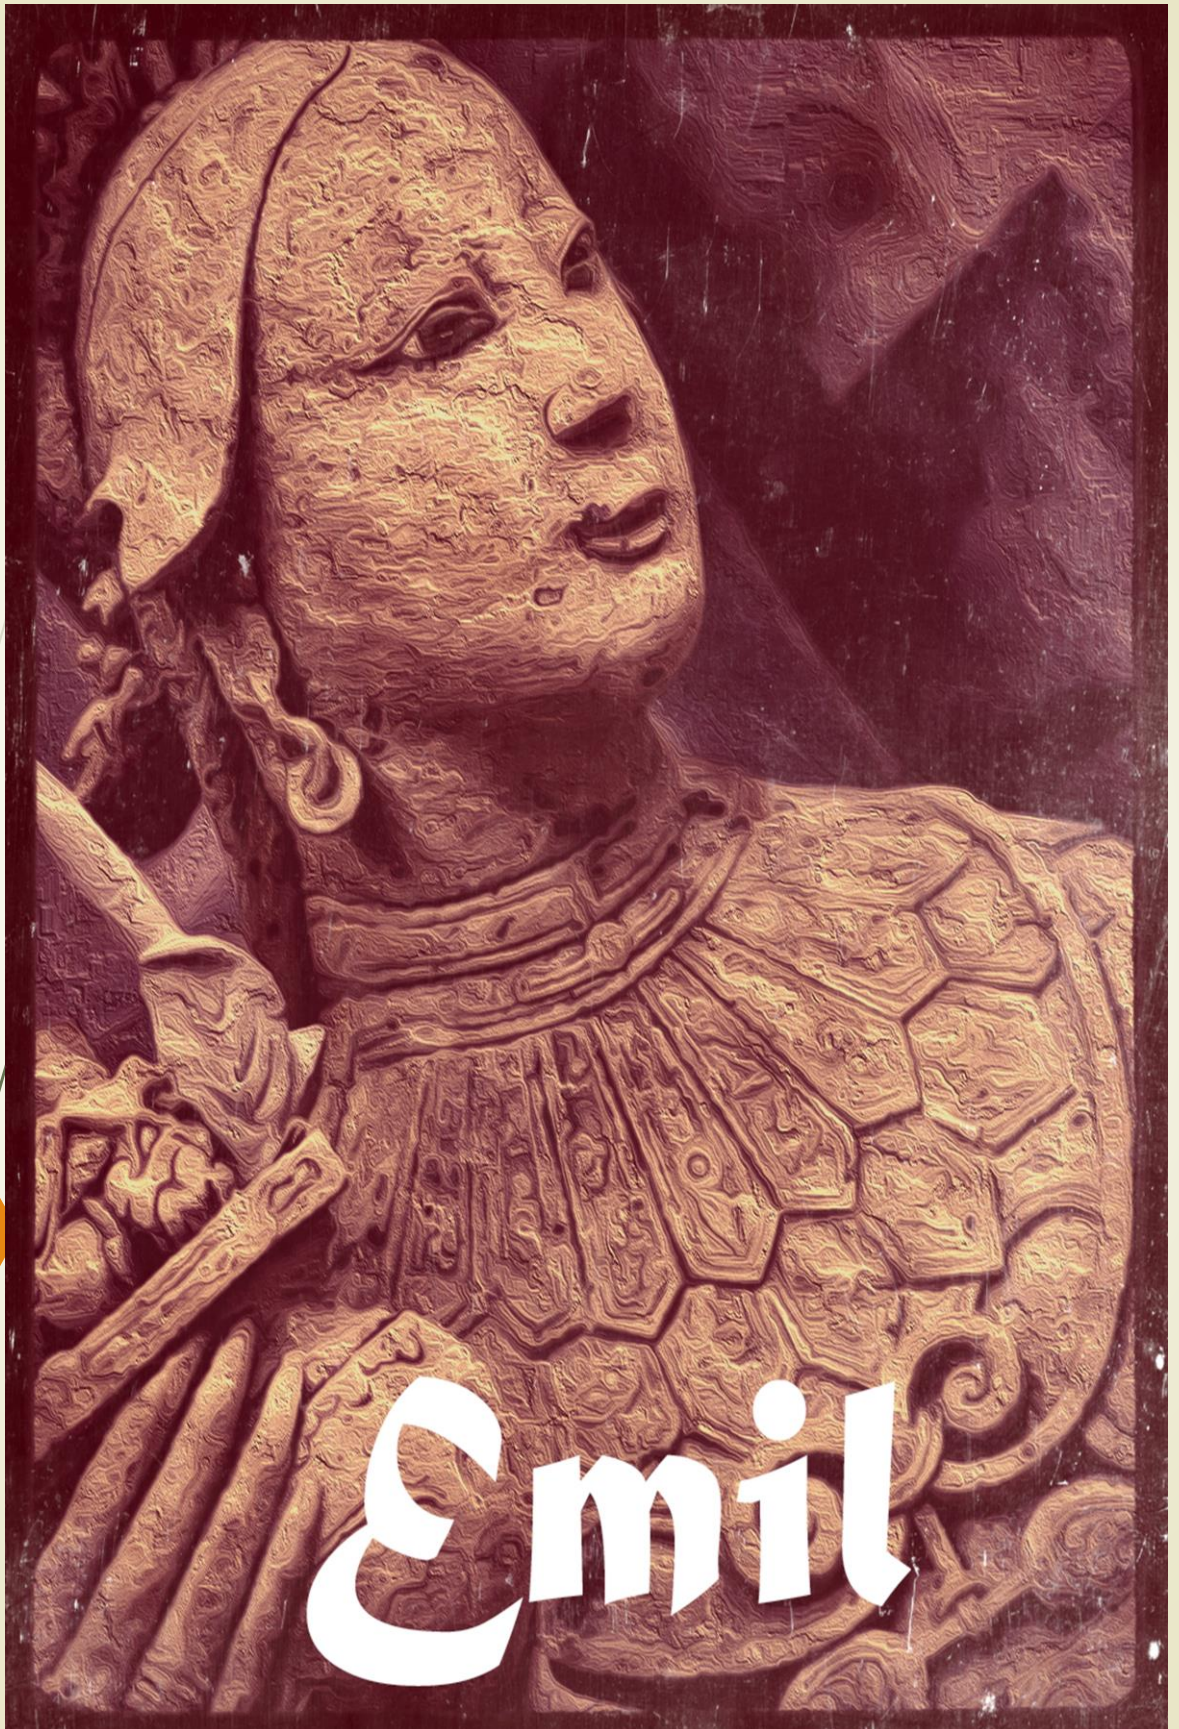

Just saying at I have been working with our former guru, James and his research of ancient Sanskrit Texts seem to show a method of changing frequencies through meditation...very promising results.

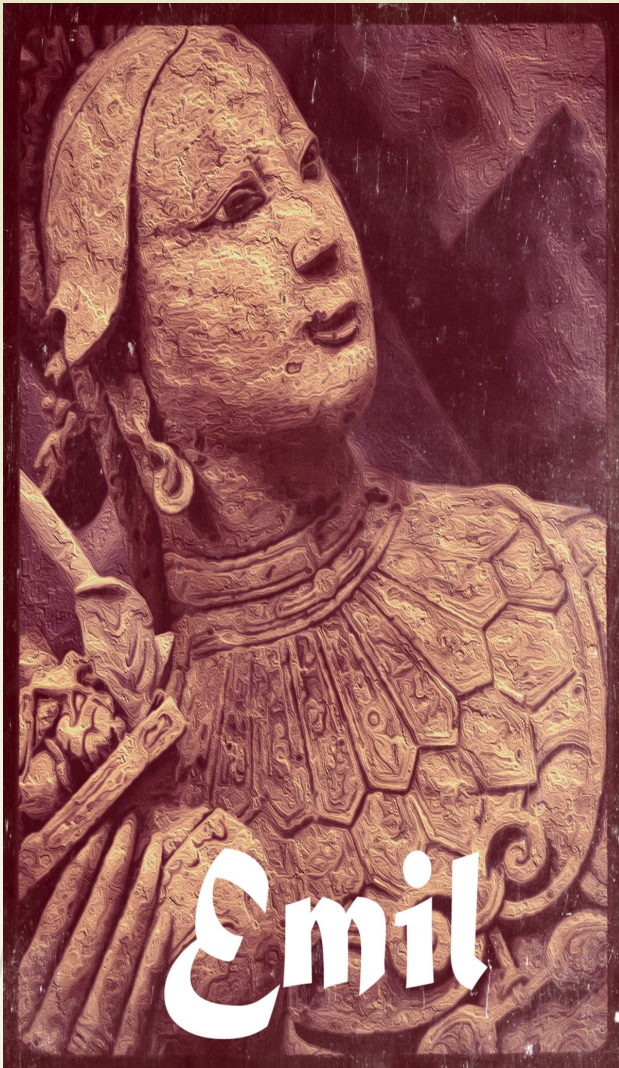

So if I can't persuade you not to set me up a "GoFundMe" account, please telex me and I can send you the needed account numbers to transfer the received funds.
